Her dress is wet, illfitting, and of no particular pattern; her slippers are broken down; her hair is uncombed; her voice is either shrill or coarse. You have seen her stand out in the back yard, and put a bare arm up to her eyes, and under it peer out to the fence or barn, where a man in an ill-fitting coat is searching for something, and have heard her shout-"John! can't George bring me some water?" And you have heard him cry back-"If he don't get that water I will take every inch of flesh from his bones." And when you have looked at her again, does it seem possible that those angry eyes have drooped in maidenly reserve, or raised in coquetish light to the face of the man in the substituting coat?
