THE DUKE AND THE BOY SCOUTS.
H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught inspects
Boy Scouts at Sarcree Camp, Calgary.

OUR ROYAL FIELD-MARSHAL TAKES THE SALUTE.

With Major-General Lessard, Inspector-General of Western Forces, and a suite of officers, the Duke inspects the March Past of Troops at Sarcree Camp.

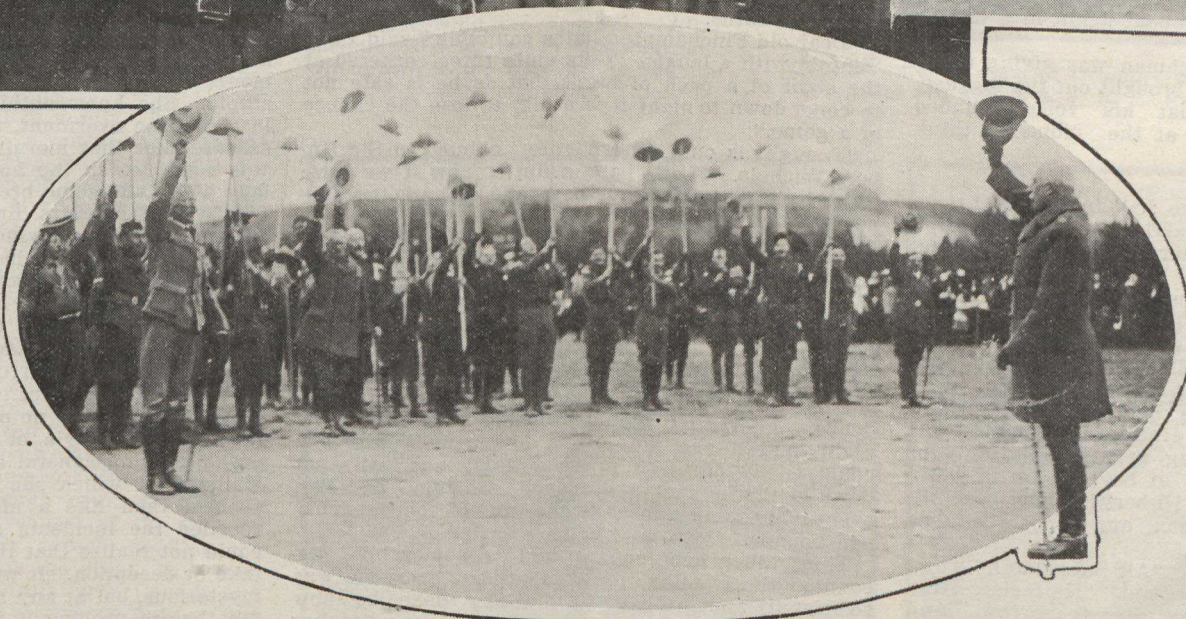

THREE CHEERS FOR THE DUKE.

Reinforcements from the 68th Rifles at Moosejaw cheering the Duke as he passed down the lines on Sunday, September 12th. His Royal Highness is wearing the field service uniform of a Field Marshal. When he reviews troops he does it with the expert eye of a soldier who has seen service on the field and has been as a Field Marshal at most of the great troop reviews in England under three monarchs.

TALKING TO A LADY.

The Calgary lady in the foreground conceals her identity by turning her back to the camera. She takes her turn reviewing His Royal Highness. In spite of the amused curiosity of his officers' suite, the Duke finds time for a pleasant chat with the lady, who has probably spent many hours on the field waiting for a favourable opportunity to come as near as possible to buttonholing Royalty in Field Marshal's uniform on a horse.

THREE CHEERS FOR KING GEORGE V.

Hats flung aloft and hoisted on rifles, the troops at Sarcree Camp respond to the call of the Duke for three cheers for His Majesty, represented by his Royal uncle, brother of King Edward VII.
