

ally in childbirth and surgery, but it is precarious and not free from serious dangers. It should no more be practiced without witnesses present than dentists give nitrous oxide, and the law should restrict its practice to special licensees or physicians of a certain grade.

WILLIAM OSLER, M. D.,
Regius Professor of Medicine,
Oxford University.