

Written for the Record.

The Sacred Heart.

O Heart of Jesus, purest, holiest,
Work of God's Almighty hand!
Thy greatest work, and yet the lowliest,
The only link 'twixt God and man.

Angels hush around Thee bending
Whisper soft in realms above;
Seraphs their sweet voices blending
Sing the praises of Thy love.

Countless thousands now are singing
Swells the song from every part;
To Thy throne we glad voices bring
"Love, O love the Sacred Heart."

Whilst on earth Thy creatures lowly
Pass unceasing on their way;
Turn not to that Heart so holy
Even one short prayer to say.

Leaving there alone in sadness
In the "Sacrament of Love,"
That Sacred Heart that gave with gladness
For us that bright home above.

Come, and underneath such suffering
Bore that awful death of shame;
That we, seeing such an offering
Would with love our hearts inflame.

O Heart of Jesus, found of mercy!
Heart that every virtue has;
Aid, O aid us each to serve Thee
Till in Thee we rest at last.

And pray grant my dearest Jesus
That when from this world I part
My last prayer will be "My Jesus,
Take me to Thy Sacred Heart." MARIE.

NEWS FROM IRELAND.

DUBLIN.

The Irish O'Connell monument, now in the hands of Mr. Bock, Mr. Foley's successor, will not be completed and erected for about two years. One of the sitting figures at the base is nearly finished, and another is in hand. Opinions are not so unanimous as represented concerning the merits of the work.

On Sept. 1st, the hay in the Mullingar district was all saved, and it is somewhat cheering to say that the yield of this crop at least is up to former seasons, but the almost continuous rain has prevented its removal except in very few cases to the haggard, and the majority is still in the fields at the mercy of the weather. Very little, if any oats have been reaped. The amount of ground under this crop is nearly equal to last year. The straw is heavy, but the grain light. It has not suffered so much in this district as in others, for it is generally sown on light soil, and consequently the rain has not so much effect on it as that planted in low-lying districts. The potato blight is quite visible among that invaluable article of food, but not nearly to such an extent as that represented in other districts. They are remarkably dry and well-flavored, considering the season they are after going through. They are at present selling retail at 9d per stone, but they would be much less if there was a short spin of dry weather to enable them to dry and cure. The ground, with few exceptions, cereals are backward, particularly turnips. Fruit, with the exception of apples, pears, peaches, and such like, is a good crop. The turf is in a wretched condition, and of course, very dear. If it were not for the cheapness of coal at present the poor would suffer greatly for fuel, and combined with high prices for articles of food.

WICKLOW.

An inquest was held at Ballyknocken, on Sept. 24, on the body of James Duggan, who was killed the previous day by a fall from a bread cart. The coroner, Mr. Phillips Newton, J. P., coroner, held an inquest on Sept. 24, on the body of Patrick Kinsella, aged 70, at Muskegh, near Tineely. Deceased was apparently in his usual health on the previous morning, and after taking breakfast was proceeding in the direction of his work when he fell dead. Verdict, "death from natural causes."

WESTMEATH.

On Sept. 24, a man named Thomas Cowan, a farmer belonging to Brittas, near Glasson, was driving a young bull into the Athlone fair, when at Ballykeeran Hill, three miles from Athlone, the bull became furious, knocked the driver down, and gored him in such a manner on the head that death ensued in a few minutes. It may be stated that the deceased reared the animal, and, knowing his savage temper, when bringing him to the fair had a ring in his nose and a log on his leg; but, notwithstanding these precautions, the animal overpowered his master. There was a boy in company with Thomas Cowan at the time, and he ran for a doctor and clergyman, but on their arrival life was extinct.

LOUTH.

At the meeting of the Drogheda Board of Guardians on Sept. 4th, Mr. Nicholas Leech, remarked that if they had another year like the present there would be thousands of people who could not pay their rates.

MEATH.

Seventy magistrates of the county Meath assembled in Kells, on Sept. 5th, under the presidency of the Marquis of Headford, to take steps concerning the recent murder of Mr. Brady at Athboy. The deceased gentleman, who held considerable property, was shot dead on Sunday, Aug. 23rd, and his body thrown into a ditch. Resolutions were passed by the meeting expressing sympathy with the family of the deceased, and called attention to the reluctance of witnesses to give evidence in criminal cases, and to the disregard of truth which was often apparent in the Petty Sessions Court. Several speakers urged that the Government should extend the special proclamation under the Coercion Act to Meath, but this was opposed, and no resolution was passed on the subject. Col. Maguire expressed his opinion that the crime was not agrarian. No one has been arrested.

CORK.

Mr. Coroner Rice, on Sept. 1st, held an inquest at Newtown, Ballymore, on the remains of a young man named McCarthy, who died suddenly in a wood near that place on the previous day. It appears from the evidence that McCarthy, with his brother and friends, were on the previous night at a fête given by Mr. Nason, who resides near the place, and that when returning in the morning with his brother he lay down in the wood, complaining of a headache. In this position he was left, and his brother told a second brother when he went home. On the latter coming to the wood he found that he was dead. Evidence was given to the effect that death resulted from apoplexy. Verdict accordingly.

Mr. Bryan Gallewey, Coroner, held an inquest at the North Infirmary on the body of a girl named Mary Callaghan. It appeared from the evidence adduced that deceased, who was about nine years old, had been playing with other children on Carroll's quay, and accidentally fell into the river and was drowned. Although every effort was made by Joseph Murphy, who jumped into the river, to save her, Verdict—Accidental drowning.

A farm house and out houses and other property occupied by John Cookley at the Farnham Railway Station was recently wilfully and maliciously torched and the building was completely destroyed.

On Sept. 4th, a man named James Conway, who resided at Burnfort, near Malin, and who had been in the employment of the Great Southern and Western Railway Company, died from the effects of having inflicted upon himself the previous evening a frightful gash across the stomach with a razor. The unfortunate man, it appears, was in delicate health and confined to bed for some months past, and whilst, it is supposed, laboring under temporary insanity, in the absence of the other members of his household, he committed the dreadful deed. Medical aid was as soon as possible procured but it was all to no avail. The deceased, previous to his death, became conscious, and much regretted the act. Previous to his death he received the last sacraments of his Church. The deceased was unmarried, and about sixty years of age.

KERRY.

A deputation from the tenantry on the estate of the Earl of Kenmare arrived in Killarney, on September 1st, for the purpose of requesting his lordship to grant them some concessions in view of the depressed condition of agriculture. His lordship intimated his desire that he should be furnished with their views through the Post Office.

The Catholic clergy of the Deanery of Listowel have passed a resolution expressing their conviction that a substantial reduction of rents is necessary to save the tenantry from ruin, and calling for a meeting of the farmers of the locality.

LIMERICK.

On August 29th, a daring outrage occurred near Brurea. A respectable farmer named David Browne, residing at Elfin, near Kilmallock, recently purchased thirty acres of meadowing in the vicinity of Brurea, and on Friday he made arrangements to cut the hay with a new mowing machine. The employment of a machine instead of manual labor appears to have exasperated the laboring men in the locality. Mr. Browne was proceeding on horseback to superintend the operations, and when passing an unoccupied house three men with blackened faces rushed out. They were armed with pistols and a pitchfork. He plunged the pitchfork into the side of the horse, killing him on the spot, and they threatened Mr. Browne that they would give him the same usage if he continued to use the machine.

CLARE.

The Irish Times of September 3d says: "Everyone who has visited Killaloe will have seen or heard of John Francis Malone, one of the best, if not the most celebrated angler on the Shannon. John Francis is about 50 years of age, and his first family are either dead or gone to America. He paid a visit to Kildare a few days ago and married a young girl still in her teens, whom he had previously known while she resided in Killaloe. It being known that the happy pair would arrive on Monday, the police were notified, and the inhabitants determined on giving them a cord nolla faillte. When darkness set in, tar barrels and bonfires were lighted opposite the residence of the happy pair, and about a dozen of concertinas were manipulated by parties who played Irish airs, while walking up and down the avenue. The police gave several notices to the people to extinguish the bonfires, but the fun was kept up fast and furious until after midnight, when a constable came up to "put out the lights." Some of the wags, however, had procured some 30 or 40 blank cartridges of powder, and placed them close to the bonfires. The constable gave the fire a kick, when an explosion followed, which aroused many of the sleepers out of their beds, and caused the constable to make a hasty retreat to his quarters, amid the laughter and jeers of the large party, who availed themselves retired to a respectful distance to witness the effect of their practical joke."

TIPPERARY.

In response to an application from his tenants in Tipperary for a temporary remission of rent, Mr. Errington, M. P., has notified his intention of granting an abatement of 15 per cent. on all rents above that amount. Regarding remissions of rent as a mere temporary palliative of the existing depression, Mr. Errington, in a letter to his tenants, declares his conviction that there must be immediate legislation to bring about—1st, the creation of a peasant proprietary; 2d, the extension of the system of perpetuity leases; 3d, the cheapening and facilitating of dealings in land; 4th, considerable changes in the laws of settlement and entail.

WATERFORD.

A mendicant named Mallon, who has long preyed on the charitable people of Waterford, and evidently to some purpose, was on Sept. 1st, arrested for assault. He is on his person £4 in gold and bank notes, a Savings' Bank book with £50 to his credit, and deposit receipts for £520. As the man whom he had assaulted is in rather a critical condition, Mallon was remanded.

It is not only the farmers about Waterford who are suffering, but the traders, farmers who have credit with the shopkeepers being unable to meet their liabilities. There are no less than five farmers about Kilmallock lying idle. There is no one to take these places, which a few years ago would have excited keen competition. It may be imagined to what a state the country has reached when one of the monster houses in Waterford has given notice to nearly all their male hands to leave, or accept only their board for six months, owing to their business having fallen off to such an extent.

To such an extent has poaching reached on the River Suir that the Fishery Commissioners, from representations made to them, have threatened to prohibit net fishing altogether on the river from Clonmel to Waterford.

ARMAGH.

On Aug. 29th, the child of respectable parents in Lurgan, named McCaughey, having accidentally gone too near the kitchen fire, pulled a vessel of water about it, thereby scalding itself to such a manner as to cause its death after great suffering the next morning.

On Aug. 30th, a Catholic young man named Patrick Walls, belonging to the neighborhood of Lurgan, died in the union workhouse in the way down Union street. His friends next day proceeded to the workhouse to have his remains removed for interment in the Dougher or Catholic burial-ground. As the hearse containing the remains, and followed by a few friends and sympathizers, emerged from the workhouse and entered Union st., all kinds of opposition were manifested. The people attending the funeral bore it with patience. A large number of Catholics from the country, acting on advice, did not proceed to the workhouse at all to meet the funeral, but wisely remained in Market street, and Church place, and the funeral proceeded to the burial-ground. The scene was of the most disgraceful description. Wonderful to relate, this took place within a few paces of the principal police barracks, situated in the same street, and not a member of that body appeared on the scene, nor was one of the stone-throwers made amenable.

FERMANAGH.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of Mr. Porter's tenantry was held on Sept. 3d, in Lisbellaw Court-house. The meeting was addressed at great length by Mr. Porter, who was manifestly opposed to the farmers' tenantry, free sale, a mixed system of large and small farms, as being better suited to the hilly, broken-up country than the large farms of England and Scotland, &c. Mr. Porter, in conclusion said he would make an abatement of half a year's rent to all the tenants whose offices were in farm-like order, lease holders being exempted. At the termination of the meeting Mr. Porter was chaired by his delighted and thankful tenants.

DEBBY.

In the Moneyre district, in which the counties of Tyrone and Londonderry adjoin, the potatoes have been a remarkably bad crop, while oats are also bad. The most of the fields of the latter place are still quite green, and to which there is no cause of complaint, and flax is by no means good. Hay as a rule is light, and a large portion of the crop will be greatly damaged before it is saved. In the low-lying districts the hay is in many instances in a very precarious condition.

A fatal accident occurred on Sept. 5th, on the Derry Central Railway now in course of construction. At a place called Ballury, near Garvagh, a ballasting engine ran into some wagons carrying stones, killing one man, named John Grimes.

GALWAY.

At Lohid, within a few miles of Tuam, there was great rejoicing by the tenantry, recently, on the occasion of the pleasant announcement by the agent of the estate, Mr. S. M. Nolan, that the landlord, Mr. M. H. Burke, Under Secretary, the Castle, Dublin, had granted a reduction in their rents of 20 per cent. A huge bonfire was set alight, and the tenants, who were merrily dancing to the jigs and reels of the Irish bagpipe, round about round, till daylight appeared.

SLIGO.

On Sept. 28th, at Knockbeg, a little girl named Mary McDonnell, was killed by a portion of a sandpit falling on her. The child, who was only seven years old, lived with her grandfather.

On August 30th, an old female servant, aged 80 years, named Margaret Dowden, who was in the employment of Mr. Middleton for the last thirty years, came from Rosas Point to Sligo, to seek a medical man, according to her own statement. She visited in Sligo Bridget Price, an old acquaintance, and took tea with her about 8.30 p.m. About nine or ten p.m. she went on her knees to pray, and died in that posture.
