most faithful servant. The Empress heard him out. She saw, humiliating himself before her, the man who had hated implacably her husband and herself, and who had sown listrust between father and son. No doubt she enjoyed the spectacle of seeing at her feet this bitter enemy, now dismissed by the very son whom he had reckoned on making his tool again, and in a single sentence, becoming an empress amother and a woman, she returned to this cringing diplomat all the insults he had cast upon her. I much have been extremely glad to intervene with my son in your favor, but your making his mind foreign to mine, that I can only witness your fall without being able to ward it off. When you are no longer there, my son will perhaps draw nearer to me, but then it will be too late for me to help you.

The prince withdrew with downcast head, and returned home, found the aidede-camp, who for the fourth time, had come for his resignation, which the fallen statesman handed to him.
