THE OLD HYMN.

There's lots o' music in 'em—the humms of long ago,
An' when some gray haired brother sings the ones I used to know,
I sorter want to take a hand—I think o' days gone by;
"On Jordan's stormy banks I stand, and cast a wistful eye!"

There's lots o' music in 'em—those dear sweet hymns of old—
With visions bright of lands of light, and shining streets of gold;
And I hear 'em ringing—singing, where memory dreaming stands,
"From Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strands."

They seem to sing forever, of holier, sweeter days,
When the lilies of the love of God bloom'd white in all the ways;
And I want to hear their music from the old measin's rise
Till "I can read my title clear to mansions in the skies."

We never need singin' books in them old days—we know
The words—the tunes of every one the dear old hymn book through!
We didn't have no trumpet then—no organs built for show;
We only sang to praise the Lord "from whom all blessings flow."

An' so I love the old hymns, and when my time shall come,
Before the light has left me and my singin' lips are dumb
If I can only hear 'em then, I'll pass without a sigh
"To Canaan's fair and happy land where my possessions lie!"

THE SIFTING OF PETER.

In St. Luke's Gospel we are told
How Peter in the days of old
Was sifted;
And now, though age intervene,
Sin is the same, while time and scene
Are shifted.

Sain desires us great and small,
As wheat to sift us, and we all
Are tempted;
Not one, however rich and great,
Is by his station or his state
Exempted.

No house so safely guarded is
But he, by some device of his,
Can enter;
No heart has armor so complete,
But he can pierce with arrows fleet
Its centre;

For all at last the cock will crow,
We hear the warning voice, but go
Unheeding;
Till thrice and more they have denied
The Man of Sorrows, crucified
And bleeding;

One look of that pale, suffering face
Will make us feel the deep disgrace
Of weakness;

We shall be sifted till the strength
Of self conceit be changed at length
To meekness.

Wounds of the soul, though healed, will ache,
The reddening sores remain and make
Confession;
Lost innocences returns no more;
We are not what we were before
Transgression.

But noble souls, through dust and heat,
Rise from disaster and defeat
The stronger;
And conscious still of the divine
Within them, lie on earth supine
No longer.

THE LIFE FOR WHICH I LONG.

When on my day or life the night is fallin'
And in the winds from unsun'd spaces blowin',
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown

Thou who has made my home of life so pleasant,
Leave not its tenant when its walls decay:
O Love Divine, O Helper ever present,
Be thou my strength and stay.

I have but thee, my Father! let thy Spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold;
No gate of peril, no branch of palm I merit,
Nor streets of shining gold.

Suffice it if—my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiv'n through thy soundin' grace
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place.

Some humble door among thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease,
Where flows forever through heaven's green expansions
The river of thy peace.

There, from the music round about me stealing,
I fain would learn the new and holy song,
And find at last beneath thy trees of healing,
The life for which I long.

THE VOICE OF SCIENCE.

Alcohol is bad both for beauty and comeliness of person. The face is greatly disfigured by it, both in regard to form, feature and complexion. It makes the features coarse, the skin uncleanly red, unsteadiness in facial features, and in time under size and form of the body at large.

—Sir B. W. Richardson, M. D., F. R. S.

Sore throat, so-called colds, passive pneumonia, glandular disturbances and ulcerative lesions are ever present menaces which belong to the servant of the alcohol habit. Moreover, it may be claimed that chronic bronchitis is an almost invariable accompaniment to the ravages of the drunkard's cup.—Dr. E. G. Hope.

The effects of drink show themselves in the respiratory organs, the heart, the kidneys or the nervous system.—M. Jeffrey, M. D.

The use of alcohol is found to be followed by a diminution of the carbon dioxide and all waste elimination.—T. D. Crothers, M. D.

Alcohol in any dose capable of producing an appreciable effect, diminishes the function of the lungs in direct proportion to the quantity taken.—N. S. Davis, M. D., F. R. S.

During the presence of alcohol in the system there is an actual reduction of temperature, a diminution of the amount of carbonic acid gas exhaled from the lungs. Instead of the bodily forces being exhilarated, they show a corresponding depression, and this in direct proportion to the amount of alcohol taken.—O. H. Newman, M. D.

Under the influence of alcohol there is a diminished output of carbonic acid gas, and this is due, certainly in part, to the action of the drug on the respiratory apparatus. Spectroscopic experiments by Dr. Kales have shown that the affinity of haemoglobin for oxygen is reduced by alcohol, and this must affect vital action throughout the body.—Medical Pioneer.

Alcohol causes kidney disease in several ways. It unduly excites the activity of the organs; by impeding oxidation, it interferes with the proper preparation of nitrogen wastes which are brought to the kidneys in an unit state for removal; when more than a small quantity of alcohol is taken, some of it passes out of the body unchanged through the kidneys, and injures the substance.—H. Nowell Martin, M. D., F. R. S.

Tissue waste is necessary to the well being of the living organism. Constant molecular change must occur in living tissue, the dead, effete matter being removed to make room for the new living tissue which rebuilds and strengthens the system; therefore, alcohol as a food, severs is like a man who rebuilds his sidewalk with rotten planks.—M. Willard, M. D.

The unbroken idea that small quantities of alcohol are harmless, permits men to drink beer and stronger drink without a question, yet a scientific study and measurement of the senses and functional activity of the body shows that twenty drops of alcohol interferes with the normal activity, and is manifest in the diminution of the sense acuteness and brain activity. Alcohol also obscures the color sense.—T. D. Crothers, M. D.

It is now generally recognized that children should never take alcohol, which, according to the highest authorities, exerts an exceedingly deleterious action on rapidly growing tissues, interfering with their nutrition, and preventing the development of their proper function.

—G. Sims Woodhead, M. D.

Alcohol, even when diluted, as in wine, beer, and cider, is a poison that changes pathologically the tissues of the body, and leads to fatty degeneration.—Augustus Furel, M. D.

Bad Medicine.

A young physician who had long worshipped a lady at a distance was one day suddenly called to attend her. He found her suffering from no particularly dangerous malady, but she wanted him to prescribe for her nevertheless; so he took her hand and said impressively:

"Well, I should—prescribe—I should prescribe that you get married."

"Oh, goodness," said the interesting invalid, "who would marry me, I wonder?"

"I would," snapped the doctor with all the voracity of a six foot pickeral.

"You?" exclaimed the maiden, "Yes."

"Well, doctor, if that is the fearful alternative, you may go away and let me die in peace."

Meat Cheese—Boil the meat scraps which you have on hand—the more kinds the better—in a very little water until soft enough to mash to a pulp. Add salt, pepper and a little sage, put in a dish with a plate and heavy weight on top. The next day turn out carefully, and serve cold. Cut the slices with a sharp knife. It is very nice for supper.
