H. H. Holmes, or Herman Mudget, whose name or alias has rung throughout the length and breadth of the continent as whose name or alias has rung throughout the length and breadth of the continent as the most unscrupulous and skillful murderer of modern times, was placed on trial for his life on Monday morning in the court of Oyer and Terminer of Philadelphia. The specific charge to which he was called upon to answer is the murder of Benj. F. Pietsel, and has already officially declared himself not guilty. The revolting details of the many crimes with which Holmes' name has been directly or indirectly connected have been given such publicity, and the cold, implacable demeanor which has acharacterized the man throughout, has been so frequently commented upon, that the trial will probably pass into history as the most celebrated case known to the criminal annals of the western hemisphere. Polar Expedition The documents from the explorer Jackson which were brought back by the Windward, after leaving the explorer on Franz Joseph Land, and which were kept sealed up in one of the cabins of the Windward during her return trip, were opened at London, the other day. Upen being opened the papers were found to record that the expedition landed at Cape Flora on September 7, where they erected log houses. All the members were given certain duties to insure regular exercise. Bears soon appeared to the number of 30, and, together with eight walrases, were killed and added to the winter's provisions. The only man who died of scurvy refused to eat bear's meat. The winter was very tempestuous, and the Arctic bears prowhed around the log cabins, and even looked in at the windows. The win ter darkness ended on February 23. Jackson and two others started north on Marco 10, with two ponies and two March 10, with two ponies and two sledges.
