

EDMONTON PAYS FINAL TRIBUTE

Thousands of Citizens Line Route of Procession to Thistle Rink

Never in the history of the City of Edmonton has a more impressive sight been witnessed than that presented by the assembly that gathered in the Thistle Rink yesterday afternoon, to do honor to the memory of the King, whose death has cast the world's greatest empire into deepest mourning.

In an enclosed space before the platform, draped in purple and black, seats were provided for His Honor Lieutenant Governor, Bulyea, his aide de camp, Major Thibaudeau, his private secretary, Mr. G. H. Babbitt, and Justice Scott and representatives of the various organizations that made up the procession.

Within a few minutes of the hour for which the opening service had been announced, the seats upon the platform were taken by the Mayor and council and representative members of the churches.

Ensign Habbirk announced the opening hymn, "Days and Moments Quickly Flying," the singing of which was led in the most commendable manner by the united choirs, accompanied by the City band.

The Rev. Dr. McQueen then read a brief lesson from the Bible, the first epistle to the Thessalonians, at the close of which the whole gathering joined in the singing of the hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee."

The Rev. Dr. McQueen then read a brief lesson from the Bible, the first epistle to the Thessalonians, at the close of which the whole gathering joined in the singing of the hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee."

Having dwelt upon the uncertainty of life, His Worship made reference to the whole-hearted devotion to duty which had characterized the reign of the late King.

"What nobler epitaph could any man wish," he asked, "than that expressed in the last words that fell from his dying lips: 'I think I've done my duty.'"

The British Empire is the greatest that the world has ever seen. It is a quarter of the globe, and its population is justly proud of the fact that wherever the British flag flies, there freedom and security is guaranteed to those who, as citizens of the Empire, are privileged to share in its protection.

At the conclusion of the Mayor's address, Ensign Habbirk offered up a brief but earnest prayer, after which Dr. H. M. Tory, president of the Alberta University, delivered the most eloquent and impressive appreciation of the late King, his every word being heard without difficulty, even by those who were seated at the far end of the vast auditorium.

Dr. Tory's address, "I am deeply conscious of the fact that this is not a time for vain and empty words; it is a solemn occasion. At this hour there is being borne to its last resting place the mortal remains of his late Majesty, Edward the Seventh, of Great Britain and Ireland, and the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India. And while we are meeting in this far away part of the empire to show our respect for his memory, tens of thousands of similar gatherings are meeting for the same purpose."

"The millions of our race are joining hands and hearts across the seas and over continents in mutual sympathy and sorrow. In the history of the world, before in the history of our nation, for while other nations have mourned their rulers, as this nation alone in former times never before was there such an empire to mourn. But there is more than the mourning of a nation; the whole civilized world is mourning, and we possess its grief. It is doubtful if any European king ever had such a place in the affection of mankind as this, and it is true that for none has there been such universal sorrow."

CANADA'S TRIBUTE TO KING'S MEMORY

In Every City, Town and Village Solemn Services Were Held at Various Hours

Ottawa, May 20.—Beneath a bright summer sun, Canada's capital today observed in fitting fashion the laying to rest of King Edward. At half past one o'clock the whistles of the city sounded, and for three minutes the business pulse of the city ceased to throb.

On Parliament Hill there were gathered the local troops, Earl Grey, cabinet ministers, all state dress; ambassadors, state officials, fathers of the city and many notables, while the centre of a square formed by the militia, the military bands were massed and while arms were reversed they played the funeral march and Dugues Clere.

During the proceedings five of the soldiers were overcome by heat. In the early evening a royal salute of 21 guns was fired from Peppan point and when the last cannon boomed forth the flags which had flown at half mast were hoisted again and King Edward became a personage in history.

"The flag has braved a thousand years and the breeze," and that, if necessary arose it would again be "Unfurled to match another foe," holding out the olive branch of peace and good will.

At the conclusion of the hymn two most impressive prayers were offered, the first by the Rev. F. W. Patterson, the second by the Rev. Canon Webb, after which the familiar hymn "Rock of Ages" was sung.

Mr. Roosevelt, speaking for himself, said: "I have a personal feeling about the King's death. I know from having been president that he had an earnest desire to keep the relations between Great Britain and the United States on the closest and most friendly terms."

"I learn with emotion of the death of your beloved father. The French government and the French people will regret profoundly the demise of our august sovereign who upon so many occasions has given them evidence of his sincere friendship and associated themselves fully in this great grief which his unexpected loss brings to you, the Royal family, and the entire British Empire. It is with a heart full of sadness that I ask your Royal Highness to accept my personal condolences, those of the French government, and of all France."

One of the leading French papers says: England has lost a great king, the world a great figure, and France a great friend."

Similar statements setting forth sorrow and appreciation comes from the heads of the civilized governments of the world.

Perhaps the greatest tribute, all things considered, comes from the lips of Mr. Wm. O'Brien, M.P. for the city of Cork. Addressing an all Ireland meeting at Bandon, he said that the King was nowhere more truly a peace-maker than in Ireland.

But if Edward the Seventh was trusted and beloved abroad, how much more was he beloved and trusted at home. One of our greatest constitutional authorities says that one of the most important functions of the crown in a constitutional monarch like ours is to maintain before the people the dignity of government.

Standing as he does outside contending parties and partying, the king's office, resting upon a proper tradition, is bound to execute and preserve the reverence of the people. No English monarch ever succeeded so completely adjusting himself to this position as did his late majesty. In the crisis through which the British government has been passing, it became every day more apparent that the King was being trusted absolutely by the nation.

LAI IN TOMB OF HIS FOREFATHERS

Funeral of King Edward VII Most Imposing in History of the World

London, May 20.—Edward the Peace-maker was buried today in the tomb of his forefathers at Windsor, while the world gave homage to his memory. Nine kings, with bent heads, followed the casket along through a lane of 35,000 troops bowed upon their knees.

A bright sun shone down upon the splendid procession. The thunderstorm and heavy rain that ushered in the day gave before the bright rays and from a spectacular standpoint the conditions were the best that could be desired for the ceremony.

Amid the sweep of the troops and the march of the potatoes, there was one whose appearance set the heart of every spectator throbbing with sympathy. It was Queen Alexandra, brave under the blow that almost died her. As the good Queen, no whit the less reverent than her consort, was drawn through the human lines, men and women wept.

The former Queen took precedence over the new Queen Mary, who was in the second carriage with Queen Maud, the Duke of Cornwall, and the Duke of Devonshire. They followed four coaches filled with princesses belonging or related to the Royal family.

At 9.10 the Royal procession started from Buckingham Palace, where the British monarchs have been guests through the throngs hastening to the funeral route, they were driven to Westminster Hall. There the cortege formed. There was no delay. At the appointed minute, 9.45, the guard of honor stepped aside. The Royal family lay on the coffin of Victoria, which lay on the coffin of Victoria, which lay on the coffin of Victoria.

The Order of the Procession. Immediately behind the gun carriage Prince Louis of Battenberg took his place. Then came Edward's charger. Behind the war-charger came King George V, with the Kaiser on his right and the Duke of Connaught on his left.

10,000 Chief Mourners. In the nave were gathered 10,000 mourners; 900 more were in Brayce Chapel, so great was the crush of the army, lined the steps of the chapel. Within sight was the Frogmore mausoleum, where lies the bodies of Victoria and her consort, parents of the dead King.

Scene Changed to Windsor. Within the Royal Chapel, the church dignitaries had been waiting for the arrival of the king's body. As the din of guns and roll of muffled drums told of the arrival of the funeral train, the magnificent organ filled the nave with music. Then with all the impressiveness of the religious rite, the procession proceeded from the station to the chapel, maintained the rigidity of attitude proper to military mourning.

The central figure of the group was Alexandra, and half supporting her was Princess Victoria. On the other side, at reach of her hand, stood King George. As the last solemn words were said, the Queen Mother apocalyptically clasped Princess Victoria's arm. Then the body was lowered into the vault, and the obsequies came to an end with the sobbing when the ratapaying have ended to purchase the industrial block.

SUDDEN DEATH AT OLDS Wife of Well Known Liberal Organizer Passes Away

Olds, May 20.—Mrs. Eliza Cummings, wife of L. H. Cummings, L.L.D., of Olds, dies, aged 30 years, at her home. Mrs. Cummings was 30 years of age, lived at Olds for the past four years, and entered the hospital at a few weeks ago. She was very clever, having recently received the degree of B.A. at university in her home province, Prince Edward Island. Her husband and a 7-year-old daughter survive.

Winnipeg, May 20.—From every town and village in the west come reports of memorial services and public demonstrations of grief for the loss of Great Britain's beloved Sovereign. From all points where are units of militia, the military paraded in full strength and attended the services at Regina, Calgary and Winnipeg. Royal salutes were fired at sunset, all troops being paraded and at the conclusion the commanding officers read the proclamation of the accession of King George.

Winnipeg, May 20.—The garrison paraded the Horse Show Building. After the militia entered, the Sons of England and other fraternities entered in regalia, and following this the general public entered, some thirteen thousand people forming with the gun uniforms and lighter dresses of the ladies a veritable kaleidoscope. The service, in which the leading divines of all the Protestant denominations took part, followed the Archbishop of Rupert's Land officiating. Shortly after six o'clock the garrison again paraded and formed in a hollow square in Fort Osborne, the Thirteenth Battery, with guns facing outward and the staff and massed bands in the centre. The troops formed a brilliant spectacle, the newly formed Highland Regiment and the forms of the departmental corps adding variety to the dull rifle uniforms.
