The Resignation of Canon Noel.

Canon Noel, at a meeting of his parishioners on Monday, announced that he had tendered his resignation as rector of St. Paul's, Harbor Grace, to the Lord Bishop of Newfoundland. Canon Noel's tenure of this office has been exceptionally long, extending over a period of forty years. The large majority of the church people of Harbor Grace have thus grown up under his spiritual guidance, and his name has long been an household word in Harbor Grace. Canon Noel has devoted himself also very specially to ecclesiastical building, doing great work in renovating the old stone church of St. Paul's. He displayed great zeal too in building and equipping schools and generally in the promotion of education. His writings on educational topics have long been familiar to newspaper readers. He has also spent long years in arousing interest in foreign missionary work, and has always taken a special interest not only in the Diocese of Conception Bay for many years, but in the Diocese generally, and in the work of the Diocesan Synod. But his sympathies have been by no means confined to ecclesiastical and scholastic affairs. He has always been prominent in social and patriotic movements for the betterment of the people and the good of the country and Empire. His retirement will remove from prominence and activity a figure which has loomed large in the Bay Metropolis, and we anticipate for him a calm and pleasant time away from the trials of active life, and we hope that he may long be spared to enjoy the retirement and long life of ecclesiastical activity and public usefulness has well earned.

Nfld. Regiment Sails To-Morrow.

His Excellency the Governor has received a cablegram from the Secretary of State for the Colonies informing him that the Newfoundland Regiment will embark on August 20th, and His Excellency will send the following answer: "Please convey to Colonel Burton, on behalf of all ranks in contingent, the best wishes of Newfoundland and the earnest belief of us all that the Regiment will uphold to the utmost the glory of the British arms and the honor of Newfoundland."

Out All Night in the Woods.

A woman named Mercer and two girls named Butler and Molloy spent all last night in the woods on the South Side Hill. They left their homes in the extreme West End of the city to go berry-picking and lost their way in the fog towards evening. Search parties, including the night watch of the police, failed to locate them. At 7 o'clock this morning the berry-pickers turned up safely, none the worse for their experience.

It Isn't Your Town—It's Yours!

If you want to live in the kind of a town Like the kind of a town you'd like, You don't need to slip your clothes in a grip And start on a long, long hike. You'll only find what you left behind. For there's nothing that's really new, It's a knock at yourself when you knock your town.

It isn't your town—it's yours.

Real towns aren't made by men afraid Lest someone else gets ahead. When everyone works, and nobody shirks You can raise a town from the dead. And if, while you make your personal stake, Your neighbour can make one, too, Your town will be what you want to see. It isn't your town—it's yours.

Here and There.

To-night's Lecture.

Ensign H. A. Hurd, S.A., will lecture at No. 1 Citadel to-night, taking as his subject "The Empress of Ireland Disaster." Mr. Hurd was amongst the Salvation Army contingent who 24 hours after the tragedy, sailed over the exact spot where the great ship went down. The lecture will be illustrated with lantern slides, some of which were specially secured while the officer was in England. Ensign Hurd is a native of this city and he bespeak for him a large audience.

Household Notes.

Grease stains on leather may be removed by benzine or pure turpentine. Wash the spot afterward with beaten white of egg or a kid tvelver.

When sweeping, wipe all the dust off the furniture and put it outside the room; then sweep down the walls.

The revolving breakfast tray is a with a broom covered with thin cloth. comfort which American women would do well to borrow from their English cousins. It makes it possible to do with less service.

To prevent fruit from crushing while cooking, place it in a fair-sized jam-jar, add the sugar and water, cover over and put into the oven to stew.

Angry Judge.

JURY FOREMAN'S EXIT.

An unexpected incident occurred recently in Mr. Justice Ridley's court, King's Bench Division, where his lordship, with a special jury, had before him an action by the London County Council claiming damages against Selfridge and Co., Ltd.

The County Council said it was agreed in 1914 that they should exhibit advertisements for the defendants on the tramway-cars for a maximum period of three years. The agreement was made through Messrs. W. H. Smith and Son. After making certain payments Selfridge and Co. repudiated the agreement. The action against them now was to obtain damages for breach of contract.

The defendants in their defences said they were entitled to terminate the contract by a reasonable notice.

Counsel: For the plaintiffs, Mr. Cecil Walsh, K.C., and Mr. Dalry, for the defendants, Mr. Hawke, K.C., and Mr. W. A. Jovitt.

Mr. Hawke, K.C., partly opened his case.

Mr. Justice Ridley, interrupting, asked counsel to state what the question of fact for the jury was, because he saw only a question of law.

Mr. Hawke submitted there were four questions of fact. He formulated two.

One of them Mr. Justice Ridley declined to accept. Then his lordship said: I think there is no answer to the case. (To the jury): Gentlemen, you will be good enough to find a verdict for the plaintiffs.

The Foreman: The jury would like to consider the matter.

"Hold Your Tongue."

Mr. Justice Ridley: I shall not allow you to consider it.

The Foreman: Some of the jury consider this a travesty of justice to the defendants.

Mr. Justice Ridley: Do you? Then you will be good enough to hold your tongue about it. In my opinion it is a clear case in which the plaintiffs are entitled to judgment, and I enter judgment for the plaintiffs, and I order (to the foreman) will be good enough to be more respectful.

Identification.

Most nations possess some means of identifying their casualties in war. Turkey, however, is an exception, her soldiers carrying no identification marks whatever. One of her most famous Pashas is credited with having said:

"A dead man is of no use to the Sultan. Why, therefore, trouble with him?"

When a German soldier falls, a little metal disc, which he carries, serves to identify him. This disc bears a number which is telegraphed to Berlin. It is here that the soldier's name is determined.

Our gallant French ally once made use of metal identification badges, but these proved to be such an irresistible attraction to the savages which the French faced in Africa, that a card was substituted. This is stitched inside the tunic.

Russia, with her vast armies, has perforce to resort to the numbering badge. Their enemies the Austrians use a badge of gummetal in the form of a locket, which contains parchment leaves.

Like the British, the Japs use the inevitable disc. Each Japanese soldier wears three of these—one in his boot, another on his belt, and the last round his neck. The British disc is made of aluminium.

WEATHER.—It is fine all along the line of railway to-day with a light West wind prevailing. The temperature ranges from 47 to 83 above.

Master of Words.

Death of Sir James Murray.

We regret to announce that Sir James Murray, the maker of the "New English Dictionary," died at Oxford yesterday, aged 78. There is pathos in the fact that Sir James Murray should have died on the day that Volume 10 of his gigantic work, which deals with words from trink to turndown, and is not yet the end of the work, was reviewed in some morning newspapers. Sir James was one of the great Victorians. Born in 1817 in the little Scotch village of Denholm, he began life as a schoolmaster first at Hawick, then in London. Many years ago his book on the dialects of Southern Scotland lifted him out of the crowd.

Thirty years ago Sir James Murray went to Oxford, but his life's work was begun in 1879: it was the making of the "New English Dictionary"—a catalogue of the English speech. Sir James built an ugly tin house at Oxford—at which Ruskin jibed—and there he kept his word and his biographies, and quotations by the hundred thousand. For thirty-six years he worked at his task with great courage. In 1913 he prophesied that the last volume would appear on his eightieth birthday.

As soon as each volume appeared it was immediately revised, increasing the labour tenfold. Lately American influence complicated the task by introducing new words and giving new meanings to old ones.

Sir James Murray slogged libraries for derivations and wrote to all parts of the world in search of information. Only a few weeks ago he was tracking down "Sufragete," which was first used by Mr. Charles Hand in a despatch from Manchester to The Daily Mail in January, 1906.

THE LASTING FAME.

It'd like to leave behind me some work that will endure, but bring me no prospect is so poor! Man lates to think of sleeping through the ages four or five, with nothing brilliant keeping his memory alive. But there is no standard, or who has built the dwelling upon the shifting sand. The house we're adorning, the great mot of to-day, whose bright renown goes soaring from Juneau to Cathay, whose voices give direction to all our projects here, may pass from recollection when they've been dead a year. Perchance some humble plodder, who seems to cut no grass, or other kinds of fodder, will, when the ages pass, be people's hearts be living, his fame so pure and strong, immortalized, for giving the world some simple song. No man can say, "It's certain, as tax and as sure, that when Death drops the curtain, my fame will still endure." To make our best end, or that is the only way; let fame live on forever, or die in half a day.

Wonders of Vickers's

To the list of companies worth mentioning recently published in THE TELEGRAM should be added the name of Vickers, Sons, and Maxim, Ltd., the great English engineering and shipbuilding firm, whose capital is over eight millions sterling. For more than 40 years Vickers's have been making material and appliances for all the peaceful pursuits, and having acquired an experience and organization unsurpassed in the world.

Including only war vessels but within the past ten years, the company have constructed over 100 ships collectively of nearly 250,000 tons displacement. In the same period they have manufactured producing machinery for 110 warships, aggregating together nearly 620,000 horse-power including turbine machinery for Dreadnought, Vanguard, and many other ships. They have also built within the ten years gun-mounts to over fifty battleships and cruisers of the capital of over eight million sterling, five millions have been spent in the provision of machinery for plant for the manufacture of material. Vickers's employ in normal times over 25,000 highly skilled workmen, and annually pay in wages £1,000,000.

TEACHING THE RECRUIT HOW TO USE A RIFLE.

A good story was recently told by Observer of the Kingston Standard, concerning one of the Kingston recruits, now overseas. Very proud of his new khaki uniform, he was waiting around camp and went to a hut, where some soldiers were trying to hit a bull's-eye, but being missed. "Here, boys," called the officer, "I'll show you how about."

And he took a rifle and missed. Having a good strain of Irish in him, his wits quickly came to aid, and he smilingly remarked: "That's how you shoot." Taking reader aim, he fired again and "the exactly pierced the bull's-eye." "That," said he, triumphantly, "is the way I shoot."
