A Contrast.

In Sir M. P. Cashin's manifesto, we have a clear-cut, definite policy of what is intended by the Government candidates, after the election on November 3rd, in the matter of agriculture. We ask all thinking men to see the difference between the expressions of Sir M. P. Cashin on this subject, and that of Hon. R. A. S. Sir M. P. Cashin promises to improve the existing means of encouraging agriculture, and to adopt a system of bounties whereby the land may be more quickly cleared. This means that strong inducements will be held out by the Government in the form of money-grants or bounties, to finance men to work on the land, in a similar manner to that done in Canada and elsewhere. The Government candidates also promise to provide for the transportation of products from the farm to the market, and also to teach both the scientific and practical side of agriculture by the best possible means. Here then in this agricultural policy we have great chances of fulfilling a war-time slogan, "back on the land," for in this policy we find outlined all the necessities to make this industry more and more profitable, and more and more of a national asset as the years go by. One of the drawbacks in the agricultural schemes of past governments, has been the absence of sufficient inducements to men to take an active interest in agriculture, on any large scale, but this will be remedied by the Cashin Party. The equally important aspect of transportation facilities to and from the farm and market, is likewise considered, and a remedy promised, and with Cashin, to promise means to perform, so that there is in this question alone almost sufficient reason why Cashin should be elected.

What a contrast is there in the few definite words of Sir M. P. Cashin and the long-winded article on agriculture in the so-called manifesto of Hon. R. A. Squires. The sections in the two manifestoes present no comparison whatever. Long-winded as is the rest of the Opposition manifesto, there is however, nothing clear in the long discourse excepting the absence of the present agricultural system of Newfoundland, and the personal proposal to reorganize the agricultural department as well as the other Governmental departments of the Colony. It is quite true that Mr. Squires does mention the construction of a model farm, with an attendant annual agricultural exhibition. It is current topic moreover, that the enthusiast (?) who is to run the model farm of St. John's East is the 'Doc' himself. Possibly this explains why the medicine was able and willing to give up $5,000 a year so that by later posing as an agricultural enthusiast and judge, he might get a yearly $10,000 stipend out of the Government treasury. As is the policy of Squires on the agricultural prospects of Newfoundland, so is his proposals on all of the great questions affecting this country's future. He has committed himself to nothing definite, and consequently the voters will not listen to one who pledges to do little for the advancement of his own country. The development of our land resources is more than a minor matter to Newfoundlanders, and the promise given out by Sir M. P. Cashin of greater attention to this important work is favorable to all, and indicative of the man's true interest in his country's advancement. Already this question alone has been the means of securing voters to the Government side, and as people realize more and more the shallowness and insincerity of Squires, hundreds more will back up the Government candidates.

Much discussion has been caused on this land question in the past, and efforts have been made to grapple with it. It is now proposed by the Cashin Party—the winning team—that the question be further considered, and our land now lying idle be utilized. In conjunction with this we might state that soldiers and sailors wishing to engage in farming pursuits, may be enabled to pursue the avocation, of their choice, as there will be just as good and as big inducements given in their own country as in Canada or elsewhere. What a future is thus unfolded. The vegetables which Squires talks about, but does not promise to secure, will be plentifully reared, and not only vegetables, but big strides will be made in the growing of some of the more hardy cereals, as demonstration has proved that even wheat can be grown here. The initial outlay thus expended by the Cashin candidates will be more than repaid by the practical results of the encouraged farmers, and the people to be benefitted will not be those akin to Prince Edward Islanders nor other foreigners, but sturdy Newfoundlanders. If enthusiasts are wanted we can supply them, and it is unnecessary to add that the annual agricultural show will be an assured thing because the products of the country will then warrant an exhibition far more than they will under the lengthy, non-committal and vague treatise of Mr. Squires on the subject. Apparently the section in the Squires manifesto on this very matter, was the work of the ardent Doctor, but even his knowledge of farming, as produced on paper, is insufficient to attract the serious attention of the electorate, and so, on this point as on others, the vote will be given to Cashin and his party because they deserve it, and because their programme spells agricultural progress, increased revenue and independence, while that of the Opposition is nothing but empty words.

Still Dropping.

The ill results of the confederation and taxation cries by the Opposition parties have confounded those who are trying to defeat the Government teams, and so the Advocate has had to revert to the policy of the Telegram as material for its scarry (?) front page. Of course the attack on this paper is unworthy of attention, because no one takes the Advocate or its writers seriously, but the incident in question is illuminating of the desperate straits to which the Opposition is pushed. The Telegram has not gone back on its former principles, but it is still an advocate of Liberalism, but not of the Coaker-Squires type of liberalism which guarantees the price of fish, at a possible lower price than the law of supply and demand warrants, and which guarantee entails extra taxation to the country. The Telegram, as always, favors reduction in tariff rates, but not at such a time as this when the present tariff rate is necessary if we would tide off the dangers of Coakerism, Squiresism, Bolshevism and Confederation.

Low indeed, must be the hopes of the Opposition when personalities only are indulged in. Where now are all the candidates, so sure of election by the supporters of the Opposition party? Echo answers where? The Opposition has admitted its own defeat unwittingly, and the Advocate writers, seeing the handwriting on the wall, have at last published the fact that the cause of the Coakerites is lost, and that the country is in favor of the Liberal Progressive Party, of which the Telegram is proud to be a supporter.

Dr. Hall at Port aux Basques.

At a representative meeting of prominent citizens convened to meet Rev. Dr. Hall, of Toronto, Senior Chaplain to the Naval and Merchant Marine Institutes of Canada, it was decided to establish a Sailors Institute for Port aux Basques and Chatham. Magistrate Robert T. Squarey was appointed President; Mr. H. H. McKay, Vice-President; Mr. D. R. Manser, Hon. Treasurer; and Mr. Frank Pike, Secretary. The list of donations was handed in and the Institute will be affiliated with the Canadian National Sailors Councils represented by Rev. Dr. Hall, who promised $300 to the scheme.

Port aux Basques, Oct. 13, 1919.

Prisoner Acquitted.

The trial of the man Ridout occupied the attention of the Court yesterday. The trial lasted till late last night when the accused was released. Mrs. Ridout, wife of the accused was the last witness to be called for the defence.

Mr. Gibbs, K. C., for the accused addressed the jury after tea, pleading for the acquittal of the accused. Mr. C. E. Hunt followed on behalf of the Crown, his address occupying about three quarters of an hour. After being charged by Chief Justice Horwood the jury retired. After a deliberation of three hours the jury men filed back into Court and announced that the prisoner was not guilty.

Mr. Gibbs asked for the prisoners release, which was granted.

Girl's Narrow Escape.

At five o'clock yesterday afternoon a young lady came very near being killed or badly injured on Water St. when a barrel that rolled down a lane, onto the street, missed her by inches only. This barrel, which contained bottled beer, rolled down McMurdo's lane and right across Water Street, smashing to small pieces and scattering the particles of glass in all directions.

Broke His Arm.

Master R. Press, son of Mr. G. Press, of the R. N. Co.'s office, met with a painful accident yesterday when he fell off a motor truck, and broke his arm. He was taken to O'Mara's drug store, Rawlin's Cross, and afterwards driven to his home where the limb was set.

St. Joseph's Solid.

Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—Our members have not reached here yet, but great preparations are being made for the reception of Walsh, Sullivan and Sinnott. There won't be a split vote at St. Joseph's, and by the reports from other settlements the West Coast of Placentia Bay will vote the straight ticket for Walsh, Sullivan and Sinnott. Cashin will surely win.

Yours truly,

STRAIGHT TICKET.

Section Man Killed.

David Whelan a Native of Colliers, Killed at Kitty's Brook.

At 6 p.m. yesterday, at Kitty's Brook, David Whelan, a section man there and a native of Colliers, was killed by falling from a moving rail trolley. He died instantly, the force of the fall crushing his skull. An undertaker was sent out by this morning's train, and the body will arrive on to-day's express.

Cashin Will Come Back. Every-One- Present-Sunday.

The George Street Campaign workers are as busy as politicians to-day and mean to fill their large Church on Sunday. The teams meet for reports at 9 o'clock to-night and an interesting time is expected. The Campaign lasts two days only, and during these two days it is expected that fifteen hundred persons will be interviewed about attendance at Church on Sunday next. Not bad for two days' work.

Cashin Will Come Back.

McMurdo's Store News.

THURSDAY, October 16, 1919. "There is Beauty in every Jar of Ingram's Milkweed Cream," is the slogan of this exquisite toilet aid, and it is one which the experience of users has gone far to justify the saying, for it certainly does tend to preserve or improve the complexion, feed the skin, keep the hands and face clear and soft, and prevent chapping, roughness and abrasions. Two sizes 75c. and $1.40. McMurdo's Nursery Hair Lotion has done splendid work among the children and has helped many an embarrassed mother out of an unpleasant situation in a very pleasant way. Price 35c. a bottle.
