Famed Old Lincoln's Inn.

FIVE HUNDRED YEARS OLD NEXT MONTH.

LONDON (Canadian Press)--Lincoln's Inn, which boasts of the King among its benchers and has provided the native with at least five of its Prime Ministers, will celebrate its quincentenary early in December. "It was in 1422," says the Law Journal, "that the Society of Lincoln's Inn, after occupying Thavie's Inn and Furnival's Inn, began its long occupation of the present site. Here, formerly the Bishops of Chichester had their town residence, and the name of Chichester Rents, a narrow turning in Chancery Lane, much altered in recent years, helps to preserve the old ecclesiastical associations of the place." How it came to be called Lincoln's Inn is related in the Law Journal, as follows:

"It was from its earlier settlement in Thavie's Inn that it derived its name. Close to the house of John Thavie--who died nearly 600 years ago--was the Canon House of Holborn, the residence of the Earl of Lincoln, who, being a person affected by the knowledge of the laws, brought the professors and students there."

"When, therefore, they migrated eventually to the palace of the Bishops of Chichester in 1422 the members of the society continued the name which they had adopted in honor of the nobleman to whom they owed their original settlement in Thavie's Inn."

Pitt, Addington, Canning, Spencer, Percival and Asquith are among the Prime Ministers whom members will be able to recall at the commemorative service and banquet to be held to mark the 500th anniversary of Lincoln's Inn. Other great legal names associated with the Inn are Sir Thos. Moore and Sir Matthew Hale. Jeremy Bentham, Lord Macaulay and Sir H. Maine are three of the many famous writers who spent studious hours in the library of the Inn.
