THE MACHINERY

Smooth Running as Well Oiled 1898 Piece of Mechanism—Some Gossip From the Heights.

The casual observer in civilian attire who wanders through the big camp on Carling's Heights does not realize how complicated and yet how smoothly-running is the machinery that moves the whole and keeps it in order. No government, imperial federal, provincial or municipal, has such a complete and orderly system under its control as has the commandant of large army. And a military camp, of

The main reason for this fact is that there is no such thing as representative government in an army, and th rank and file have no responsibility further than to obey orders, whether these be right or wrong. One man is at the top, and he, supposed to be the most competent of all, is unchecked in his actions by any advisory board, parliament or ballot, He, in theory at least, has supreme sway over every individual in his command.

From the office of Col. Peters. D. O. C. and camp commandant, there are issued every morning what are called "divisional orders." These are distributed around among the various corps. and guide the actions of the camp for the day. The divisional orders are incorporated in the brigade orders, issued from the quarters of Col. MacDonald and Col. Davidson, commanders of the infantry and cavalry brigades, respectively. Each of the three infantry regiments and the three batteries has a regimental staff clerk, who goes to the brigade headquarters each afternoon about 4:30 o'clock and gets the brigade orders, which are then taken to the various corps. and incorporated ir the regimental orders. Col. Moscrip and his staff worked hard and successfully to get the regiment into first-class shape before entering camp. The Twenty-eighth is favored by having in its personnel many energetic business and professional men from the towns of St. Marys. Mitchell, Listowel and Stratford. Many a word of praise has been heard from the other bell, manager of the Merchants' Bank at Stratford, who although in camp for the first time, has the running gear of the regiment in first-class order. Everybody Busy.

This morning the Thirtieth and Twenty-ninth Regiments went through some good regimental drill on the heights, while the Twenty-eighth was practicing at the cove ranges. The Thirtieth, or the Wellington Rifles, as it is better known, is by far the largest regiment of the two camps. Nearly all the men have service uniforms of blue canvas, and look very cool when on drill. Most of the Twenty-ninth were still wearing their red serges, but all have wide straw hats of a very comfortable make, around which red bands are worn. The bugle bands of the two regiments were massed during drill this morning. Last evening the Twenty-eight Regiment arranged a very enjoyable concert on their lines. Messrs. W. B. Graham and R. M. strongly deprecated any disposition to treat so important a report lightly. The clause recommending the appointment of a field secretary for the diocese evoked considerable discussion, taken part in by Ven. Archdeacon Young, Dean Davis, Rural Dean Hicks, Archdeacon Richardson, Rev. Dr. Mc-Kenzie, Canons Downie and Craig, On the clause referring to normal lectures, the grant was continued for next year.

On a subsequent clause, Rev. Dyson Hague referred to the great problem of how to get children to church and Sunday school, There was a great lack on the part of parents, who should accustom their children to attend. He had lately visited a Sunday school in Wingham in the parish of Rural Dean Lowe, which was a model in all respects, and the best he had seen. He referred to methods adopted for bringing in scholars. He was informed that own, in order to increase the attendance of the class, it was divided into two parts, and each given a color. Then they began to hunt up scholars, and the one having the greatest number of new scholars at the end of a given time, was treated to a dinner by the losers.
