Cotton used in the open front house should be kept brushed off, and should be opened up on fine days to facilitate ventilation this will prevent the accumulation of moisture which is more injurious to the health of the birds than cold. Plenty of clean litter should be provided for scratching purposes. Lice, which are usually present in certain numbers should be kept in control. This may be done by dusting the birds with insect powder or by smearing the skin around the vent with blue ointment about the size of a pea. Care should be taken not to smear the feathers with this ointment.

In our attempts to classify field root varieties we have met with some very peculiar mixtures that were sold under special, sometimes fancy variety names. A year ago we received a package of seed supposed to be of a Yellow Intermediate variety, but which produced at least one half small round garden beets. This year we had a variety which gave us one half Swiss Chard. In both of these cases the mixtures were obviously due to the mechanical mixing or varieties in some warehouse, due very likely to carelessness on the part of those handling the seed. Whatever the cause of the mixing the fact remains that a farmer buying such seed would suffer a considerable loss and would seem only fair that the dealer should be some means by which growers who receive such seed could

"Why are our young folks going wild?" is a question that Booth Tarkenton attempted to answer in his novel, They're a Weird Family. The question that parents are asking is pretty generally answered. Tarkenton's answer is that the young people are kept away from home these days by the automobile. The young folks are out there serving time in the penitentiaries, reading books which regard sentences for crimes. They have the idea that they can do anything, remarks Tarkenton in Kansas City Star.

But the real blame, he thinks, rests with the parents. The discipline was brought up under a generation of morals. "We developed a generation of children who were told that there has been a breaking away from faith in recent years, with an undisciplined generation of children," he says.

We sometimes have blamed Puritanism of the past. We have blamed the Puritans for the progress that we did have its faults. But it was great discipline. It developed character. It taught the children to have a feeling that conduct mattered.

In relaxing the discipline which was imposed on the children, we are going of getting too far; of assuming that because some of the innocent people are going wrong, that the whole thing is right, then it is all right to go wrong. They impulse and whim.

It is the discipline that have been too severe. But it tended to produce self-controlled men and women who were not indulged. There is something for parents to think about. The young people are not going to be any more

Exercises for Eyes.

A New York optometrist has invented a machine for exercising the muscles of the eye. His theory is the human eyeball is pulled out of shape by the tug of the stronger muscles against weaker ones, thus interfering with the focusing of light and the eye nearsightedness, astigmatism. Therefore he claims that these defects can be cured by pulling the eye back into its normal condition by regular exercises which bring all the muscles of the eye to work.

The exerciser consists of a ball at the end of a bent rod which is held vertically in the hand. The eyes are exercised by following the motions of the ball.

For the slight exercise, the ball is moved horizontally before the eyes, bringing into play the muscles which move each eye toward the center of the nose. Then the ball is moved perpendicularly. This exercises the muscles that move the eyes up and down. For the far sight exercise, the eyes are brought into play by following the ball in circles before the left eye. The right eye is brought into play either one or the other of the following methods, or combinations of
