Hurricane Million-Makers

You could find no stories in pages of fiction more dramatic, sensational than those of the increase of wealth in minutes, far more than most thrifty and successful can amass in a long life of strenuous labor—of men who up poor and retire to be day rich.

Such a day of sudden ruin was the day, when the North change was the delirium and the last year of the 15 by trains, and the cycle exacted the killed by horses and Ross Robertson's ago, paid per at Erie orhip each to incident therthe

And that such sudden fortunes are within the reach of the poorest has been proved again and again—notably when Mr. J. L. Livermore, between breakfast and luncheon one day, won half a million dollars by the simple expedient of selling white alarmed speculators were frantically buying, on the suspicion that he was trying to effect a "corner" in cotton.

Before his game was seen through he had raised his spoils to over two million dollars, a feat of which he remarked later to a friend "It's not bad for one who, only a few years ago, was a poor office-boy employed by a Boston broker, and who considered a hundred dollars unattainable wealth."

Amazing stories are told of J. R. Keene's luck in speculation—how, during a slump in Northern Pacific, he captured for himself and a few associates a clear profit of $7,000,000; how he netted $3,000,000 from one deal in American Tobacco shares; $4,000,000 by operating in National Cordage Stock; $2,000,000 by an American Sugar Refinery deal; and $1,500,000 by a few days' gamble in Brooklyn Rapid Transit Stock.

But even such sums as these, colossal as they are, have been eclipsed many times on the New York Exchange. "Commodore" Vanderbilt, founder of the famous family of multi-millionaires, once cleared $5,000,000 by a deal in Harlem Railway stock, which he bought at eight dollars a share and sold at prices ranging from $75 to $175. In later years Jay Gould, the "Wizard of Wall Street," made $4,000,000, at the rate of $800,000 a minute.

But such colossal gains are matched by heavy losses, as when Messrs. J. J. Astor, R. W. Golet, and a few other millionaires once dropped $9,000,000 through a slump in Union Pacific; and again when Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jacob Astor, and John R. Hoadley lost $3,000,000 in a few hours of unlucky gambling.

Some years ago J. M. Longyear, of Michigan, accidentally discovered, and was able to purchase "for a song," land which contained 30,000,000 tons of iron ore. To all offers of purchase he turned a deaf ear until the United States Steel Corporation at last made an offer which he

ALVINSTON

The funeral of the late James Evans who passed away in Petrolia Hospital on Saturday morning, took place from the late residence on Monday afternoon and was largely attended. Rev. A. L. Spracklin of Hope United Church officiated. The deceased was a native of Alvinston, Ontario, and was a member of the Alvinston Methodist Church. He was a well-known resident of the town and was highly respected by all who knew him. He was a member of the Alvinston Methodist Church and was a well-known resident of the town and was highly respected by all who knew him.

Thanksgiving services were held at the Alvinston United Church on Sunday. The pastor, Rev. A. L. Spracklin, preached a very helpful and inspiring sermon. At the close of the service the choir rendered a beautiful hymn. An appeal was made for a special large collection in the church for the recently organized plant with the result that $1200 was received. The money was for the plant.

stream of all of Ham- similar amper home. ey might, Ella son for manufactures, which he pre- his spurious notes. But each of the notes bears the same number, apes as the number is usually the flate thing at which a bank official looks the probability is that the similarity of the numbers in the bundle would be observed almost at once.

To get a different number on each note, it would be necessary for him to "smash" his plate when he had printed one, make a new plate for the next note, and so on. That, of course, would entail too much work and reduce the "profits" tremendously.

Often the forger, once he has printed his notes, is afraid to attempt to pass them. For example, when a man named Jacobus, an English artist, was sent to prison for three years at the Old Bailey a few weeks ago, it was mentioned that when the police entered his home there were signs of poverty everywhere—he and his wife were forced to sleep on the floor. Yet there were bundles of excellent counterfeit notes in various parts of the room.

Not so faint-hearted was another counterfeit, who actually gave $2,000 in forged notes to charity. His generosity was his downfall, for the bank clerk who went to the hospital to collect the notes found out the fraud by examining some of the notes while he was returning to the bank by bus.

Faces Worth Fortunes.

There was a time when "laughing" faces were actually manufactured to meet the demand of those who wished to be amused. Up to the end of the reign of James II., human "sculpture" work was carried out by roving tribes of gypsies called Comprachies, who were of Spanish origin. They bought and even kidnapped children, and practiced a science or art of human disfigurement.

Children thus treated grew up with an immovable and fantastic grin. They were an attraction at all successful travelling booths and entertainments until the custom was repressed by William III.

Recently a wealthy and eccentric man in New York, anxious to impart something of the rural atmosphere into his town residence, engaged a man to crow like a farmyard cock outside his bedroom every morning. Yet this is only a revival of an old English Court custom. During several reigns there was a Royal Cock Crier. The man had a Royal Cock undergore an operation of the pharynx. His post was that of watchman, and he ranked the palace

AFTER ALL There's Nothing To Equal Birk

He always and kept a guarded jealousy. was finished he automatically the remains into the jar. when he had finished a drawing that pleased him, he would allow himself the unequal pleasure of smoking a whole pipeful of the remains that had been stored in the jar. Even then the remains of this super-smoke were, with a subtle satisfaction, automatically knocked back into the jar for a further resurrection at a later date.

This ritual accorded to smoking is also found in the case of Anthony Trollope. The great novelist smoked at work and treated his smoking almost with reverence. One of his study walls was fitted with a series of tiny containers, protected by a sliding glass door. In these he kept a valuable supply of tobacco and cigars. Each section was dated, and the great writer, possessed of an ultra-methodical mind, smoked through each in order, relling the section as he passed on.

And pipe-lovers who wish further to prove the association of brains with this habit turn with glee to the announcement of the inimitable Mark Twain.

He said, "I severely limit my smoking to times when I am not sleeping or eating!"—and he found it hard to keep even to that!

But critics of the pipe habit can equally well retaliate by quoting the poet Swinburne, who loathed the habit of smoking.

It is recorded that once when he could not find a smokeless room in his club he shouted, "James the First was a knave, a tyrant, a fool, a liar, and a coward, but I love him, I worship him, because he slit the throat of the blackguard Raleigh, who invented this filthy smoke!"
