

Special Senate Committee

can come from greater participation in collective bargaining.

viii) Credit Unions and Cooperatives These organizations can assist the poor to attain a meaningful role in production.

ix) Programs of Social Experiment These would provide a better basis for social action by testing the validity and effectiveness of alternative social programs.

x) The Total Situation The process of economic development will not, in itself, eradicate poverty. As Galbraith has said, "Growth is only for those who can take advantage of it."