NAVIGATION IN GOLD CAMP.

Low water in Porcupine Lake re tards navigation, and now that the government is building docks at North and South Porcupine, until the fail rains descend, a dam will also be constructed across the Porcupine River at the north end to check the flow of ater. In this way small boats are to reach the temporary docks. during the low water period.

COLLINS-in memory of my dear brother, William Collins, who died July 23, 1911. Farewell, brother, till we meet you In those realms of endless day. Where the Saviour He will crown us; He has washed our sins away.

All our conflicts will be o'er. We shall gaze on our Redeemer;

We will praise Him evermore. Sad and lonely were your sloved ones When at first God called you home. They are trusting in their Saviour

They can say, "Thy will be done." So, dear brother, we will meet you When life's pilgrimage is cer, We will sing of our Redeemer On that glorious, happy shore.

A GREAT SERIAL STORY

The Sunday World takes pleasure in announcing that, beginning next week, "Buried Alive," by Arnold Bennett, will appear in serial form in The Sunday World.

This will constitute easily the best serial feature ever offered the public by a Toronto newspaper. Among the many brilliant young English novelists of to-day, Bennett is without a peer—the best evidence of his popularity being the enormous sale of his works among all classes. He is a master of English, and has the happy faculty of writing a very entertaining story, which contains nothing that can be called trashy. He is a keen student of character and of contemporary social problems, and all his works throw an illuminating ray on different phases of

"Buried Alive" shows something of Mr. Bennett's lighter side. It is a charming comedy, which concerns itself with a famous painter, who takes advantage of a case of mistaken identity to disappear, leaving the impression that he has died. Amusing complications naturally arise, and from these Mr. Bennett has succeeded in making a most interesting and amus-

As stated above, the story will appear in The Sunday World, beginning next Saturday, and will be given in weekly instalments of from half to a full page in length.
