speeches in regard to this very question.

To this Col. Hughes replied that the government wanted to do all the looting itself and wanted to have political allies of Capt Sullivan, like Aylessworth, do all the talking.

Col. Hughes cited the case of Lord Beresford, who had criticized the British navy; and Col. Roosevelt, who had shown up the scandals of the military administration, to show the constitutional latitude allowed to naval and military officers in criticisms, as in the public interest. But as to the government's harsinger of Lord Dundonald's dismissal tending to sever the tip between Canada and the mother country. And there was much going on in Canada to-day under the patronizing eye of the prime minister the tapet minister that the ded in the same direction; as, for instance, the propagnad of the coterile led by Mr. Bourassa and recently recruited by the addition of the innocent young member for Montmagny (Mr. Lavergne), who wanted Canada to have the treaty-making power, to abolish appeals to the imperial privy council, and, in fact to denounce every tie of connection execpt that of the grand old British ilag, with the goal in their minds' eye of a Canadada republic.

Col. Hughes replied that the government wanted to all the office.

Hie demanded to know what right, he asked, had to have a policy in regard to the military and the saked, and the military administration, to show the constitution of the minister and to the prometric sample and the prometric sampl speech to an onslaught upon Col. Hughes. He said that as Col. Hughes had taken back his attack on Gen. Hutton, he would probably be taking back his attack on Sir Frederick Forden and Mr. Fisher in a few days and begging for favors. He had begged in the past.

When Dr. Russell had concluded reading Col. Hughes' letter of apology to Gen. Hutton, Col. Hughes arose and said: "I have great pleasure in acknowledging the authority of that letter; and I wish to state that when I wrote it I was assured by the highest military authority in Canada that if I retracted I would get an opportunity of serving my country in South Africa."

Dr. Russell went on to say that the proper course for Lord Dundonald to have pursued was to have first resigned and then, if he wished, to lay his views before the people. It showed a singular lack of courtesy on Lord Dundonald's part to practically charge his superiors with being cads and boors; and had not Lord Dundonald given assurance that his break was premeditated, Dr. Russell would have thought it was a spontaneous explosion and. as Shakespeare makes Gower say: "What it was a spontaneous explosion and, as "stranger" as given by the Standard Shakespeare makes Gower say: "What Dictionary and other works. Lord. Dundonald, Dr. Russell said, had allowed himself to be misled by somebody in the "Baker settlement" of the Eastern Townships.

Jabel Robinson deplored the loss of time consumed in the debate, and said the trouble would not have occurred but for officious meddling.

Rufus Pope returned Dr. Russell's banter with interest. He referred to his speech as the valedictory of the little member for Hants. The giant of the house, Mr. Fraser, of Guysboro, had been given a seat on the Nova Scotia bench and now to strike the average, said Mr. Pope, the bantam of the house was to be given a seat beside him.

house was to be given a seat beside him.

Since the word "pettifogger" had been rehabilitated by Mr. Fisher as a parliamentary expression, Mr. Pope wished to say that no more miserable specimen of that kind than Dr. Russell had ever been exhibited in the house or on the committees. Mr. Pope thought the country would be edified to learn that a man with an appointment in his pocket had spent half an hour defending the word "foreigner," as applied to Lord Dundonald. The fact remained that the word had been used, the insult had been passed, and that book was closed. ook was closed.

First of Politics.

The incident was the first time he had ever heard of politics being mixed in the military affairs of the eastern townships. Two-thirds of the officers and cere heard of politics being mixed in the military affairs of the eastern townships. Two-thirds of the officers and men of the military affairs of the eastern townships were Conservatives, a fact which was easily explained by their hisjorr. They were settled by U. W. there were and Yankee tran anexation in 1849 the settlers took sides, the Loyalists on one side and the Yankee traders on thother. Afterwards, at Confederation, and ever since, the Conservatives had been the loyal party of the district. As to the Baker family milita, it was too the Baker family milita, it was too the Baker family milita, it was much to the responsibility of the district. As to the Baker family milita, it was too the family milita, it was too the family military and part Liberals. That very statement was a confession of sullity and mission that a right of dictate as to the integrity of the milita was too the military and civil power in the properties of politics. The way M. Sir Wilfrid referred in terms of praise to Sir Frederick Borden as minister of militia. No other minister of militia. No other minister of militia had done as much to advance the interests of the militia as the present occare of the office.

Col. Hughes said it would not be long thill and one great imperial army. He had no objection to having a Canadian officer in command, but he did not want it for the mere purpose of giving more political patronage to the government. Col. Hughes expressed regret that Sir Frederick Borden, who had won a warm place in the regard of the people of Canada by reason of the militia, should have been led into his present position by the interference of his colleague, the minister of agriculture.

Dr. Russell of Hants, who followed, devoted the greater portion of his speech to an onslaught upon Col. Hughes. He said that as Col. Hughes. He said that as Col. Hughes. he would probably be taking Application was yesterday made to the city relief officer toward defraying the burial expenses of Edward Magee, the English army pensioner, who died at St. Mi-chael's Hospital. Deceased had no relatives in this country, and the army and pavy eterans, tho he was not a member, fel called upon to look after the remains. The city was asked to contribute the sum of $6 allowed to bury panpers. The veternade unless a relative of a deceased per on came forward and claimed the remains son came forward and chimed the remains and asked for interment; otherwise, a corpse must go to the dissecting table.

The funeral of Magee will, however, take place this morning, the veterans defraying the expense, beyond the small sum which the Ontario Government now allows to assure the bodies of old soldiers finding a peaceful resting place.

Joseph McCarthy, a boy employed in Kilgour's box factory, had his hand hadly lacerated yesterday while working at a stamping machine. He was taken to the Emergency, where it was found necessary to amputate the fourth and fifth fingers. throat.

Sir Wilfrid concluded with a declaration of fearlessness, in so far as race cries had been raised before in Quebec. He (Sir Wilfrid) had been traduced as a traitor to his race and religion. But he said he had no more fear of the charge now made against him than of the other ones.
