CHAPTER XXV
A RESPITE.

"Isabel, my dear little cousin, what is it?" said Conyers, as, after one wild cry of "Basil!" Isabel clung speechlessly to him, shaken by tearful sobs. He was shaken himself by the relief, the unmistakable gladness in her voice. He was not altogether unaccustomed then. "You've been too long alone. You've got scared by the cold and darkness, and this is what the Stormont folk would call an 'unco place' with a glance around the gorge, now a black pit of thundering noise. Your mother was getting anxious about you, so I thought I'd better take a look around for you. I'm afraid I startled you coming so suddenly upon you, but I thought you'd hear me on the bridge, though the water does make a row, he went on, to give Isabel time to recover—an unconscious Orpheus, had he known it, who had brought his Eurydice back from the very brink of the shades. To the girl's disordered fancy she seemed already to have overstepped the boundary, and the familiar tones striking across 'the voice of many waters,' the sudden transition from the chill touch of Death to this warm human clasp was for the moment too bewildering.

"Has anything happened? Did any one venture to—?" began Conyers, a sharper note in his voice. His cousin's agitation was somewhat excessive even for the natural 'excitement' likely to beset a girl alone in the falling dusk in such a creepy place; as he mentally styled it, yet there seemed something else to account for it.

"No, no," said Isabel, mastering her sudden hysteria, as a new fear struck her. Unless Ashe had returned to the village by the lower bridge, which was not likely, it being the longer way, he must be close behind them now. In the first enormous relief of finding that it was not he but Basil who stood beside her, she had been incapable of any other thought or sensation, but now she began to wonder what had brought Conyers so suddenly upon the scene, and to realize how infinitely more difficult his presence would render her position. True, he would stand between her and Ashe, but what would Ashe do—how long would he hold his hand? Till there was no smaller chance of gaining his desires of making some profit of his knowledge, so long—but only so long, she was quite keen enough to divine; but meantime the one thing to do was to prevent the two young men from meeting immediately.

"Let us go back to the hotel," she said hurriedly. "For once I won't object to the electric light glancing among the queer old chalets; I want light and plenty of it, turning away with a shiver from the loud water and the dim world beyond it, to which she seemed to have drawn so near for love. But whether such a consummation of earthly desire were possible or no, Isabel would never lack help if he could give it. Something in the tone of Lady Stormont's letters struck him as unsatisfactory, and when he heard of Ashe's appearance at Caux, the natural man could stand no more.

"Well, I hope they won't be in too great a hurry shutting up shop, now that I've come. There wasn't very much going on at home. One can't always be shooting, and when I heard you were coming up here I thought I'd renew my acquaintance with some of these jolly chaps," with a comprehensive nod toward the majestic peaks far up among the stars. "It's too late in the season, I know, but if the weather holds, one might do some good work yet."

"I'm afraid you won't be able to coax or bribe a guide to go with you. My father has been trying it. He feels, like me,

I think, too much shut in here, and always wanting to climb up and out of the valley. But the guides say there is too much fresh snow; they are cautious itself, and I suppose it's better so." Isabel was saying, catching at a safe subject, when the click of a falling stone caught Basil's ear and he glanced behind.

They had passed the first of the electric lamps, considerably placed on the outskirts of the village, and in the circle of a strong, blue-white light, which deepened all the shadows beyond, Ashe's tall, slight figure, the easy carriage of his handsome head, were at once recognizable. Basil paused.

"Do you mean to say that that fellow has had the cheek to follow you here?" he exclaimed.

"He is here, at least," said Isabel, involuntarily quieting her step a little. A sudden thought struck Conyers. Could the fellow have had anything with Isabel's extreme agitation? There had been more than one alarm in her sudden cry. "Till I could Ashe have met her—?" his hand closed very tight.

"I know you think I'm prejudiced against Ashe," said Basil, although a former experience would seem to leave the subject alone. "But I hope—something of a feast. I hope—he hasn't—wounded today." For the moment he could hit on no other word to express his sudden fear, and its grotesque inappropriateness to that encounter under the chapel portico forced an odd, desperate laugh from Isabel. They were passing another lamp, and Conyers looked at her in uncomfortable surprise.

"Worry me—why should Mr. Ashe worry me?" she said with her head a little higher. "By the by, we needn't give him the impression that we are running away from him," deliberately slackening her pace a little. Basil must not imagine that she was afraid of him, he behind, whose shadow, elongated by the glaring lamp, almost touched their path. But Ashe made no effort to overtake them. He had provided "Miss Stormont" with quite sufficient food for thought, and while at first he was somewhat surprised to see her with an escort, he was by no means ill-pleased to recognize Basil Conyers. The drama of the curtain had now been fairly rung up would be played with a fuller stage; that was all. His triumph would be the more complete since it would be witnessed by the one he loved, the husband almost of Miss Isabel—Stormont. He could afford to let him have his brief innings now.

ANOTHER ROYAL WEDDING

Princess Victoria of England and Russian Grand Duke.

COPENHAGEN, Sept. 4.—Reports of the engagement of Princess Victoria, of England, and the Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, of Russia, are revived, and in responsible quarters are confirmed. The Grand Duke will accompany his mother, the Dowager Empress of Russia, on her coming Scandinavian cruise, when he will meet Queen Alexandra and Princess Victoria. A number of Russian detectives have arrived here as a bodyguard to the Dowager Empress during her visit. They are quartered at a villa with, in the castle grounds. Their presence is due to the colony of Russian fugitives here, which has increased rapidly since 1906, and now numbers 2,000, including several adherents of the Terrorist organization.

Daily Fashion Hint for Times Readers.

A BELMORE TOP COAT.

Various models in nobby top coats for the ensuing fall and winter are already being shown, and perhaps the most attractive of these are the belmore, a garment of three-quarters length with semi-fitting back, the waistline of which is dropped about three inches below the natural waistline, giving the back of the garment a very mannish effect and one which is strikingly becoming to slender figures. These coats are seen in all sorts of novelty fabrics used in plain tailored suits and separate coats this season. The skibo sergees in their novelty mixtures are specially smart. Being a severely tailored garment, the sleeves are long and moderately full, the fronts double breasted and the neck having a turnover notched collar like a man's coat.

A SEVEN HOUR FIGHT

Battle in the Vicinity of Casablanca on Tuesday—Much Casualties Light.

Casablanca, Sept. 4.—Eight Frenchmen were killed and seventeen wounded in an engagement yesterday outside the camp. The dead include Major Prevost, of the first battalion of the foreign legion, and Lieut. Benizaz, of the second battalion of Algerian Sharpshooters. The Moors concentrated the largest force they had yet mustered in this vicinity and returned to the attack again and again after encountering the deadly fire of the French artillery and machine guns.

The enemy's losses are described as enormous. The fighting opened at 5 a. m. and lasted seven hours. Major Prevost conducted a scouting expedition, which was the actual cause of the battle, the object being to locate the enemy and prepare the way for an extensive offensive movement later. The major advanced about eight miles in a southerly direction meeting only with scattered bands of Moors which were easily dispersed. He then gave the order to return and it was when nearing the camp that his force was assailed by hordes of Moors, who were formed his men in hollow squares with the irregular Algerian cavalry in front. General Druide quickly reinforced Prevost and the engagement immediately developed into a desperate conflict, from which the Moors retreated only after their ranks had been decimated by a deadly fire which it was impossible to withstand.

FLAGS FOR RURAL SCHOOLS

Ontario Department of Education Will Purchase Canadian Ensigns.

TORONTO, Sept. 3.—In pursuance of the formulated some time ago by the department of education is calling for tenders for the supply of flags for the rural schools of Ontario. The ensigns are to be "Union Jacks, with the coat-of-arms of the Dominion of Canada." The offers of firms having such flags for sale will be received until Wednesday, Sept. 11.

For the purchase of ensigns of this type the legislature voted an appropriation of $5,000 as a beginning. Each school will receive a flag, which must be displayed in the classroom at the discretion of the trustees. The ensigns are to be flown on high days and holidays from the flagstaff. No provisions have been made for presenting them to the urban schools. That step may be taken later.

NOT PLEASED WITH CHOICE

Ontario Liberals Object to Laurier Taking Graham Into Cabinet.

Toronto, Sept. 4.—There was almost a mutiny this afternoon among the Liberal stalwarts here at a meeting of the Ontario Reform Association. The trouble was over the withdrawal of Hon. George Graham from provincial politics. All had gone smoothly at the meeting until about the time for adjournment. President Mowat thought the meeting should not break up without "hearing from Archie Campbell, but Mr. Campbell refused to speak. Dr. Chamberlain, at this point, arose uninvited with a protest against the way in which the old Liberals who had fought the battles of party had been thrust aside when chances of preferment came round. The remainder of his speech was drowned in the noise that followed, and President Miles, of West Toronto, gained the floor.

"I say," he began, "that I think it is a disgrace for Sir Wilfrid Laurier to take away our honored leader and leave us stranded this way." But he got no further, a motion commending the selection of Mr. Graham was thrust in and carried.

Among the speakers were Hon. Mr. Ayleworth, who paid a tribute to Mr. Graham as the right man in the right place. He had been chosen because he was unequalled by any other man in the province.

Mr. Graham spoke briefly, promising to devote his attention particularly to Ontario, and he hoped to assist in securing a majority from the province for Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the next election. The outlook was not discouraging in provincial affairs, he said. He urged the members of the legislature to get together at the earliest possible moment and choose one of themselves as the new leader.

No action was taken by the association re the selection of a leader, but it seemed to be the opinion of those present that the position will go to Hon. A. G. MacKenzie, of Owen Sound. While he declines to commit himself, it is understood that Mr. Graham views Mr. MacKenzie's probable succession to the leadership with satisfaction.

A consensus of opinion seems favorable to an early calling of a caucus of members with a view to definite selection, this caucus probably to be followed by a man-moth provincial convention, at which the new leader will be formally introduced and assist the party in determining a strong line of policy.

HARRY THAW'S NEPHEW
BECOMES MISSIONARY

Young Stephen Thaw Takes Up Religious Work in Syria.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 4.—Stephen Bow Thaw, nephew of Harry Kendall Thaw, has just arrived in Syria as a missionary for the Presbyterian Church. The fact that the young man has entered the missionary field came out only when letters were received from him announcing his safe arrival. He sailed three months ago just after graduation from Yale.

Stephen Thaw, who is twenty-one, will be heir to one of the largest fortunes in Pittsburgh, his father, Benjamin Thaw, being immensely wealthy.

The killing of Stanford White by Harry Thaw is said to have affected the young man deeply, and since that time he has taken a greater interest than ever in church affairs.

NEW DOGMAS FORCE YOUNG
CLERGYMEN FROM PULPITS

CARLISLE, Sept. 4.—The Rev. R. J. Campbell appealed at Llandudno on behalf of several young ministers who had been driven from their pulpits in consequence of their acceptance of the New Theology.

He wished that some means could be devised to help them, not as makers of schemes—they did not want that—but to provide a platform for the utterance of their message despite the intolerance of the churches.

The opening of a fund was suggested and Mr. Campbell said there would be a consultation on the proposal.
