THE OLD APPEAL.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier owes his leadership in the party, and whatever position that leadership has given him to the success of the agitation in Quebec, following the execution of Louis Riel.
This agitation, which was certainly sincere on the part of many followers, was managed for their own political purpose by a group of adventurers.
These politicians offered the late Sir Adolphe Chapleau not only office and power, but a sum of money equal, as he said himself, to five years salary as a federal minister, if he would place himself at the head of a Nationalist party. The eloquent French-Canadian rejected the offer and set himself boldly and loyally against the movement.
Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the late Mr.
Mercur were ready to take up the campaign, and the premier's Saskatchewan mucklet speech is a matter of history.
This was nearly twenty years ago, but at each election since then the old story of the execution of Riel is made to do duty in the province in the interest of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.
It is a sign that the campaign is on when Le Soleil, home organ of the premier himself, publishes a sketch of Mr. Fitzpatrick, minister of justice, in which is the following paragraph:
"Who does not recall the far-famed trial of Louis Riel, accused of high treason? There was a question of raising subscriptions to send to Riel to employ counsel, when Messrs. Fitzpatrick, Lemieux and Greenfield, resolved to proceed at their own expense to the assistance of the unfortunate follow-clients. Despite their forensic skill and their eloquence, Riel was ruthlessly condemned to death, to satisfy the vengeance of the Orangemen.
What could they do in the face of violent fanaticism so cunningly organized? Riel was sacrificed. The rain-Jameson, of the Transvaal, and many such like, have been found guilty of the same crime, and were never executed.
The one was French and Catholic, the other English. This difference alone sufficed to obtain a different sentence." This is a perfectly grotesque misrepresentation. It does not mention the cold-blooded murders committed by Riel, nor the fact that his was the second rebellion which he had organized after he had been spared the first time.
The comparison with the Jameson case is maliciously false. Whatever offence Dr. Jameson committed it was not high treason. He was not a subject of the Transvaal government, and was not even accused of the offences committed by Louis Riel.
Everybody knows that Louis Riel would have met the same fate had he been an Englishman or a Scot. This old race appeal, which done duty in four Dominion elections and in five provincial elections in Quebec, ought now to be dropped.
If the government organs in the premier's own city can give us no better reasons why he should be continued in office than the fact that Louis Riel was executed and Dr. Jameson was not, the case must be desperate.

A PEACE RECIPE.

A new prophet has arisen among the Little Englanders. He signs himself "A Lover of Justice," and his proposals find a place in the Westminster Review.
He wants England to give a great example to all the world, and to become the peace maker of the nations. To begin with, England must get clear of her colonies. "We must simply cast them adrift and let them do as they like." This would "show the way." And the rhapsodist continues:
"Then the name of England would "ring through the wide earth, and "would be as music in men's ears. She "would be the darling of the nations, "and all men would bless her name, "for she would have done the greatest "thing ever achieved by mortal man." This man is really a sort of grim joker. If the British colonies in all parts of the world were turned loose to be the prey of the nations there would be a fine carnival among the powers in gathering them in. The United States would go after the late British possessions in North America. Russia would proceed to the annexation of India. There would be another Boer propaganda in South Africa. Australia and New Zealand would be the great gauntlets. There cast off colonies which desired autonomy would have to fight for it. The powers would fight among themselves for some of the rest. In short Britain would have given all the rest of the world the occasion for a new thirty year war, and would be more extensively cursed by the people of the world than any nation has been since the time of the Crusades.
This Lover of Justice is simply carrying to a logical conclusion the doctrine of fiscal and military non-resistance taught by certain British politicians. These constantly proclaim that Britain must not pursue a policy which appears to be for her own interest, lest in doing so she should give offence to other countries. For the purpose of standing well with other countries Britain has kept open her own market. Her shipping laws are equally generous to subject and foreigners. When she controls a port overseas she throws it open to the world.

All the while her own ships are met with national restrictions in foreign ports, her goods are met at foreign ports with protective tariffs, and every new territory acquired by her competitors becomes a trade press for the make Britain the "darling" of other countries. She is absolutely the most friendly of all the powers.
They all take what she gives, and they all sympathize with her enemies when she is in trouble. British statesmen are learning in a rather hard school that other powers respect other qualities in a nation more than they do the spirit of abnegation.

THE ELECTION IS AT HAND.

It is certain that the government party leading in St. John have been informed that the general election for the House of Commons will take place early in November. Even if this intimation had not been given out it would still be evident from the peculiar activities of the ministers that an early election is contemplated. The Grand Trunk Pacific deal is an election measure, and the government intended to appeal to the country on it last year. This plan failed because the promoters, after signing the agreement, held up the government for a better deal. Now the Grand Trunk Company is satisfied and unless some new discouragement occurs, the election will soon come off. It is time to get ready—Sun.

THE PREFONTAINE CAMPAIGN.

The minister of marine and fisheries is cutting a wide swath on the Pacific coast. At Vancouver Mr. Prefontaine promised a deep water port. He also undertook to make a new dredge to cost $50,000 should be built at that place, and agreed that there should be no more purchases of buoys from St. John.
New Brunswick. They have been made to be manufactured in British Columbia. In New Westminster he was shown a fish hatchery. His remark is thus reported in the government organ: "What "is the capacity of this building?
"Just ten millions? Where! We ought "to just ten millions? Where! We ought "and if I have any say there will be "two new ones started very soon with "treble the capacity of this one."
The returns from Mr. Prefontaine's visit to Victoria are not yet available.

The Gazette pours out abundant rhetoric over the alleged exhibition of the conservatives in this province seeking the leadership of Mr. Blair.
The esteemed legal leader-writer of this dimwit is not yet available.

THE EVOLUTION OF A CHUMP.

The power of character, of fixed and determined devotion to an ideal win the rewards of the world, even love itself is effectively shown in the evolution of a chump.
Charles "Fleming" Embree, called "The Chump," in the September McClure's.
The hero, lowly born, a "chump" in "all that outwardly bespeaks the man, "sees his immediate duty and does it, "fixes his eyes on his high desire and "moves unwaveringly to it. The story shows the sincere sympathy and interest of the reader who follows Martineau through the low and high with keenest appreciation and rejoices with him in his final triumph over his environment, over himself.
The evolution of the Chump, his rise to genuine grandeur, is a story full of human nature and told in simplicity and strength. It is thoroughly American, a true reflection of an interesting phase of life in the Middle West. Lucius Hitchcock furnishes the excellent illustrations.

A PECULIAR ACCIDENT.

ing in East 14th street today, was shot she accidentally pulled the trigger and the bullet struck Aquino, passing through his brain. The girl was arrested and fainted three times on the way to the police station. She was released tonight on $1,000 bail.

effective address conferred the rank, ing and warmly applauding. Past
