AFTERNOON SESSION.

Is a cross-examination of Goodspeed, following closely his actions on the day of the murder. Witness could not remember the conversation that took place in the graveyard, as related in the evidence of King and Keliy. It was Higgins, he said, who proposed not with us."

Continuing Goodspeed told again of meeting Higgins and Doherty in the graveyard on Friday, August 1st., at that time King and Kelly were there, that time King and Kelly were there.

Beginning with Frank Higgins' request the details of the murder. Goodspeed morning Mr. Morrill will go to the jury. Under the legal definition of the term "accessory" the crown case against the prisoner has been difficult of establishment and should he be acquitted today, no great surprise will be felt by those who have followed the evidence. Should this be the case the crown will proceed against him control the burglary charges some time before the elose of this circuit.

All day yesterday was taken up with the examination of witnesses for the case that chief of whom was the state out of Higgins's pocket.

Intertable Aligning with Frank Higgins' request the details of the murder, Goodspeed told the story in almost the same words he has been under oath. Questioned more closely regarding distances and that was done there.

Contrary to Higgins's story he declared that there had been no stop in the journey through the park; that they had sat down nowhere, and that the examination of witnesses for the not been taken out of Higgins's pocket. on the burglary charges some time before the close of this circuit.

All day resterday was taken up with the examination of witnesses for the defense, the chief of whom was the prisoner himself. He was on the stand altogether about three and a half hours and his evident sincerity, straight forwardness and desire to tell the whole truth, even though it might tell was on the stand in White's candy factories.

Clared that there had been in was very much afraid all the time, he said, and made no protest, as he thought Higgins would kill him as he had Doherty. On the way in from the park he asked Higgins why he had done the murder, and Higgins said it was none of his business. During the walk in, Higgins told him three or four times that he would kill him. The reason he went with him from day to tory.

Describing the details of the murder, witness told of Higgins's threat to kill him thless he had a hand in the deed. In answer to the chief justice he said
