

LADA"

putation of nearly a century behind
t sold

or Mixed

from one to two in your Ford saving in one preciation

the $1000 or less class, of service, are worth from less than their purchase their depreciation.

er a year's hard work, sell for only $125 less than and new. That's Ford

in depreciation of these ranges from $125 in the $275 in the other—both savings for Ford owners.

owners tell us that it mile on an average to paying for gasoline, oil, tires.

ing in depreciation for a you pay all your expenses —while if it is $275, you enough money in your y for driving your Ford nd in preference to other 000 cars, lets you save in e a difference in deprecis all your motoring bills o two years.

ter Company

OF CANADA, LIMITED.

John, N. B.

All cars completely equipped, including electric headlights.
Equipment does not include accessories.

After the "storm"
MOIR'S
chocolates they dispell clouds, and spread sunshine

ed one day what she would have for ing through her cook book she found grated cheese with crackers. She Cormick's Jersey Cream Sodas, and better than she had expected. There such dishes, any one of which, if are used, will help a woman at her ing new and appetizing for her table.

Cormick's Jersey Cream Sodas

So, like and 25c packages

MAHONEY WILL BEAT "DOC" SMITH IN THE LATTER'S OWN PARISH OF SHEDIAC

(How Candidate of Slanderbund Crew Stands at Home—How Grits Protected Oyster Beds—How Smith Loves the Workingmen—How Well the Minister of Public Works is Being Supported Shown by More Than 1,000 Names on Nomination Papers.

Shediac, May 26.—The Parish of Shediac will give a majority next Tuesday for Hon. P. G. Mahoney, minister of public works, notwithstanding that Dr. R. A. Smith, his opponent, lives here and has extensive business interests in the district. It would not be surprising if the town itself should go against Dr. Smith. The Parish of Shediac has been for years a Conservative stronghold, and but few Conservatives will give Dr. Smith a complimentary vote. In fact, a number of former Liberals will support Mr. Mahoney, as can be seen by a list of those who signed his nomination papers.

Not Strong Candidate.

In some of the newspapers much has been made of the fact that Dr.
Smith is a nephew of Sir Albert Smith, for years a member of parliament for Westmorland and a member of the cabinet of Hon. Alexander McKenzie.
Sir Albert was one of the most brilliant men of his time, but that does not mean that his mantle has in any way fallen upon the shoulders of his nephew. It may be mentioned that Sir Albert's son, who lives in this parish during the summer months, is not now an enthusiast in supporting candidates of the Liberal party remnants. He was formerly one of the Liberal members of the county at Fredericton. His experience with the Liberal politicians and their methods did not impress him favorably, however, as Dr. Smith fully realizes.
One of those who signed the nomination papers of Hon. Mr. Mahoney is former Mayor E. R. McDonald of this town, who for many years was a strong Liberal worker.

Many Support Mahoney.

Excepting the Smith firm, the leading business interests of Shediac are supporting Hon. Mr. Mahoney. His nomination papers were signed by more than one thousand voters, including 150 in his own parish of Bedford, 200 in Sackville, and 175 in Dr. Smith's own parish.

The nomination papers of Dr. Smith were meagrely signed. Among the signatories were half a dozen of the Smith employees, including his brother-in-law, Robert Jardine, formerly of St.
John, and about the same number of relatives of the solicitor for the Smith business interests, James McQueen.
But, however, these were sufficient to cover the law.

The people of Shediac were greatly amused when they read Dr. Smith's pathetic manifesto, written for him and read to the voters. That part of it accusing the government of taking the oyster beds away from the people was particularly touching, especially as it is well known here that the Grit government always threaten to open the oyster beds to its friends whenever an election was approaching. The result was that many valuable beds were almost ruined by this reckless policy which permitted promiscuous and destructive fishing.

How Smith Paid His Men.

Dr. Smith's newly discovered anxiety for the farmers and workingmen was also amusing. For years the employees of the Smith lumber mills were paid partly in goods out of the Smith general store in this town, instead of receiving all cash for their hard work and long hours. The same policy applied to Smith employees in the woods and wherever the Smith interests of Shediac had workings.

Hon. O. M. Melanson, of this town, speaker of the legislature, is working hard for his friend, Hon. Mr. Mahoney.
In the general election Hon. Mr. Mahoney, then not even a private member of the house, carried the county by more than 450 majority.

(Note to St. John Times: "Can you beat it?")

Celebrated Divorce Case.

Mrs. Jessie F. Hammond, wife of Charles E. Hammond, a nephew of John Haye Hammond, prominent in South Africa before the Boer war, has been granted a divorce from her husband by Judge Connolly of the Superior court at Portland. Ten thousand dollars alimony was granted by the court.

Mrs. Hammond is a strikingly beautiful blonde, about twenty-two years old, and was formerly a very prominent figure in Ottawa society, where her father is in the service of the Canadian government. During the past two or three years she has lived in Portland.

Cruel and abusive treatment were the charges against the libel.
The married life of the couple was unhappy from the start. Both Mr.
Hammond, who is about thirty-eight years old, and Mrs. Hammond met frequently at social affairs in Ottawa.
They were married in June, 1913, and separated shortly afterwards but lived together at odd times until November of that year when the final separation came.

ONLY 2,500 BRITISH TROOPS IN IRELAND EASTER MORNING

Gen. Friend Believed He Had Enough Men to Meet Any Emergency.

LOYD GEORGE IS LOSING NO TIME

Meets Redmond and Carson and Outlines Plans for His Peace Mission.

London, May 26.—David Lloyd George has already entered upon the preliminary of the task that has just been allotted to him—the conciliation of the Irish factions. He had conversations today with John Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, and Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Ulsterites, and has planned a course of action which will involve visits to various parts of Ireland, and interviews with men of the most diverse opinions. The fact that parliament will adjourn next Thursday for three weeks is considered fortunate for his task, as this will make it impossible for any discussion of it to take place while the negotiations are proceeding.

Dublin, May 26, via London.—On Easter Monday, the day on which the Irish rebellion began, the number of available British troops was only 2,555. This information was given by Major General Cowell, who testified today before the royal commission which is investigating the uprising.

General Friend, who was in command of the British forces in Ireland at the time, admitted that the number of troops was small, and said that until April 1 he had been responsible for this state of affairs, having taken the ground that he had enough men to meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of strong measures to suppress the rebellion, but when they heard of the capture of Sir Roger Casement they came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the rebellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they
came to the conclusion that the risings
were a fiasco. It was testified that
Baron Wimborne, the lord lieutenant,
suggested on the night before the re-
bellion broke out that a raid be made
on Liberty Hall, the headquarters of
the state of affairs, having taken the
ground that he had enough men to
meet any emergency which might
arise.

Both witnesses indicated the military authorities had been in favor of
strong measures to suppress the re-
bellion, but when they heard of the
capture of Sir Roger Casement they came to the conclusion that the ris