

New-Look Plaza For Lorne Park

The above illustration shows a perspective of the new Lorne Park Shopping Plaza. It is being constructed on the west side of the road, north of the tracks. Ground has been cleared and work on the buildings is ready to begin. The builders, Phoenix Developments hope that the building will be ready for occupancy late this fall. The same group of developers have designed and built several smart looking plazas around Metro. They call them neighborhood plazas, aiming at the mid-week shopper.

POLLUTION

to clean up the mess. Along with the sodium hypo chlorite, which contained about 52,500 pounds of chlorine, large quantities of calcium hydroxide and chloride of lime were added to the water in an attempt to oxidize the pollutants.

Mr. Anderson told council that the initial treatment of the pond had reduced the smell, but, hoping to clean it faster, he circulated the water, hoping that the aeration would help. The turbulence only increased the smell, lifting the foul-smelling sludge from the bottom and releasing the odor into the air.

On Thursday July 21 and on the Friday, additional tank-loads of chemical were added but by last Monday, the pond was still in a septic condition.

Tests made on Monday showed that the pond water is relatively clear below the 7 1/2 foot level. The chlorine, settled to the bottom, had oxidized the water to that level. Mr. Anderson told council that there should be enough chemical in the water now to complete the job.

The water was recirculated yesterday in another attempt at mixing and oxidizing the pollutants in the top level of water.

By today, the smell should be almost all gone, and if not today, Mr. Anderson hopes that it will be in the near future.

The Ontario Water Resources Commission has placed test holes around the pond to determine the flow of ground water around the pond and will keep a check on the movements of any polluted water.

Library Co-Op Closes Up

BRAMPTON — The Peel County Library Co-Operative will cease to exist after July 31, this year as a result of action of Peel County Council at its July meeting.

Many functions of the co-operative have been taken over during the years by other libraries and it was felt the co-operative had outlived its usefulness.

Ray Underhill, of Brampton, a director of the co-operative, was present at county council when the action to disband was taken.

He told the council members, the co-operative was formed in 1948 by an order of council with very limited funds and accommodation.

"The county was packed with one room schools at the time," said Mr. Underhill, "whose libraries were at a low ebb, so the co-op branched out into the schools using a bookmobile to give the children a wide selection of reading material."

"We also moved to assist public libraries such as the ones in Streetsville, Port Credit and Brampton."

"Things have changed down through the years," he added.

He said the bookmobile visited schools in the county four times a year and changed books. There were 4,531 books distributed in Chinguacousy for eight public and one separate schools, 1,956 books in Toronto Township for separate and public schools, 3,000 books in Brampton among six schools and 1,000 in Streetsville among three public schools.

Mr. Underhill, explaining the disposition of books owned by the co-operative said the ones presently in the public and separate schools and public and association libraries throughout the county would remain in those schools and libraries and become the properties of the boards of those institutions.
