DAN RICE AND HIS BEAR.

A circus had come to town, and boys of ten were wild with excitement over the show. As boys will, they tried practising some of the feats which they saw represented on the showbills.

One of them succeeded so well that he attracted the attention of one of the managers who was in need of just such a boy. When the circus left town the child was missing from his home. He had been stolen, and had now to undergo a severe training for the life into which he had been forced.

For ten years his poor parents heard nothing of him. Then he wrote to them telling them that he was winning fame under the assumed name of Dan Rice. He had been very fond of animal pets from early boyhood. Now, he developed great courage, skill and patience in training wild animals. This talent made him so valuable to the company that he rose rapidly. When he reached manhood he soon owned a part of the menagerie.

Among those belonging to his partner was a female bear, an unusually fine specimen. But she was very fierce, despite all the efforts which her owner had made to tame her. He tried again and again to win her good-will, but failed. At last he gave up in despair, pronouncing her untameable.

Dan Rice had not been unobservant, and now proposed trying her himself. His partner replied: "Go ahead. If you succeed you may have her." Rice lost no time in beginning his efforts, which ere long were perfectly successful. He always carried in his pocket a lump of sugar, an apple or something he knew she relished. "Sallie," as he called her, became very much attached to him. He could do anything with her that he chose.

A few months after winning his bear Dan Rice became a Christian. He considered seriously the subject of his business. He thought prayerfully over it, and became convinced that he could not consistently continue with a circus. He sold out his interest, including Sallie, to whom he was strongly attached.

Eight years passed by. One day he found himself in a city where a large circus was showing, having with it an unusually fine menagerie. The animals strongly attracted him. Rice knew that his name would open the way for him into any circus with a glorious welcome, but he wished to go incognito, so bought a ticket and went in. He had been strolling about for some minutes, observing the animals attentively, when he saw that a large female bear seemed in a great state of excitement, and he recalled had been ever since his entrance into the tent.

Shortly the keeper, accosting him, said: "What have you done to that bear?" "Nothing at all," Rice replied. "The man remarked, 'She seems much excited when you go near her cage, and more so when you walk away.' 'I have observed that myself,' said Rice. 'Well, I must ask you to leave the tent; you must have done something to her,' said the manager.

"I have paid my money; I have done nothing to your bear, and I will not leave until I am ready," replied Rice.

Meanwhile the bear's excitement grew more violent.

"Then I shall have to put you out," exclaimed the keeper, at the same instant seizing Rice by the collar.

But he was a powerful man, and wrenching himself loose, he answered: "If you don't know how to quiet an animal, I'll show you," at the same instant stooping under the rope which guarded the cages.

"She'll tear you to pieces!" shouted the keeper; but Dan Rice slipped his hand into the cage, laid it on the bear's head, uttering the one word, "Sallie."

She lay down and licked his hand. The bystanders were utterly amazed. The keeper laid his hand on Rice's shoulder exclaiming, "who are you, anyhow?" When he was told that it was Dan Rice, so famous as an animal trainer, and that Sallie had belonged to him, he wondered no more. The news quickly spread and he and Sallie held an ovation. He told that the actions of the bear had quickly aroused his suspicion that she knew him. He had already tested the fact by his own movements before the keeper accosted him.

This story and Rice's real name were told me many years ago by one who knew him personally. I tell it as I recall it. The name has slipped my memory.—Christian Observer.

It is the old, old lesson that human hearts are always learning and yet have never wholly learned—that no life is so poor, so miserable, so helpless or hopeless that it may not be transformed by the power of God into a life of gladness and blessing.

"I tried a hundred remedies in vain and reading about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I decided to try it. After having used half a dozen boxes of this preparation my old trouble had entirely vanished and I was enjoying better health than I had since girlhood.
