PRIVATIONS OF A CASTAWAY. Thrilling Story of Wreck and Adventure at Sea.

ture at Sea.

A thrilling story of adventure and privation was told by the survivors of the Glasgow ship Glencairn, who were landed at Liverpool by the Pacific Steam Navigation Co.'s steamer Orita. The ship, which was commanded by Capt. John Nichol, of Ardrossan, carired a crew of 20, and there were also on board Capt. Nichol's wife and the wife of the steward, Mrs. Parry. The Glencairn was bound from Rochester to Seattle and Tæoma with a general cargo, and went ashore at Cape San Paulo, off Terra del Fuego, on July 22, during fog. The Glencairn afterwards sank. On leaning the sinking ship the misfortunes of the party were intensified by the capsizing of one of the two lifehoats which were launched. Seaman Morley was washed away, and the dead body of Seaman Schmidt was found under the overturned boat about two hours after it had capsized. A Swedish seaman named Edward Gustafson had a perilous struggle for life. He scrambled on to the top of the upset boat, and despite the severity of the weather and a violent snowstorm, clung to his precarious position until rescued. On reaching the shore the ship-wrecked party, which included the two ladies, made wood fires and secured shelter as best they could, erecting temporary tents. The bitter coldness of the atmosphere, however, and the scantiness of provisions were keenly felt, more particularly by the ladies. They came into contact with a tribe of Indians inhabiting the territory on which they were stranded, and, learning that a British missionary was stationed some miles away, they succeeded in getting into communication with him. Horses were found for the two ladies, and the men walked 25 miles to the mission settlement. The remainder of the overland fourney was made by the whole of the company mounted on horseback. On reaching Punta Arenas they were hospitably treated, thanks to the good offices of the British Consul, through whose agency they were shipped to Liverpool by the Orita. whose agency they were shipped Liverpool by the Orita.

ALMOST A TRAGEDY.

Sportsman Nearly Swallowed by an Irish Quagmire.

Irish Quagmire.

In a wildfowl shooting expedition in Ireland a gentleman named Findiator got as near death as he is ever likely to do. He was wildfowl shooting along the Belfast Lough strand near Holywood, County Down, and stumbled into a quagmire.

Struggle as he would he could not extricate himself; in fact, his efforts at escape made him but sink the deeper. Another terror was added to the situation by the in-coming tide, which threatened him with drowning even if he escaped being smothered in the mud.

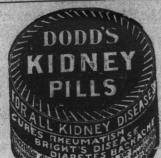

When he had almost given up hope, some passengers in a passing train noticed his predicament, and on arriving at Holywood telephoned to Tillysburn and Sydenham, from whence two men named Mooney and Morgan, wearing long boots, immediately set out to the rescue. When they arrived the mud had reached Findlater's beard, and Mooney, ignoring all risk, gallantly walked into the mire, sinking quickly far above the knees. Morgan stood nearer the edge holding his hand. Mooney took off a belt he was wearing and threw it, and by this means they supported him for some time.

But unaided they could not extricate the sportsman, while they themselves were sinking deeper and deeper. All three were becoming thoroughly exhausted when two or three other workmen arrived with a rope, and after much exertion all were dragged to safety.

Gambling in Australia.

Gambling in Australia.

The Australian correspondent of The London Morning Post writes: The gambling evil in Sydney and Melbourne had reached a stage which demanded drastic measures. The main streets of Sydney were thickly dotted with betting clubs and shops, which the law was formerly unable to control. Almost in the heart of Melbourne the famous "Collingwood Tote" carried on a flourishing unlawful business, and that, too, under the very eyes of the police. The most rut buainess, and that, too, under the very eyes of the police. The most skilled detectives found it next to impossible to gain access to the premises which were fortified against surprise and provided with numerous means of escape. It became manifestly impossible to secure the conviction of the conductors. Places of this kind have been absolutely suppressed, both in Melbourne and Sydney, by enactments which empower the Supreme Court, on the affidavit of a police official showing reasonable grounds, to declare such premises common gaming houses. After such a declaration any person found in the "quarantined" premises, of entering or leaving them, or even any building which is used as a means of access to them, may be immediately arrested, and unless he can prove that he was there for a lawful purpose he becomes liable to six months' imprisonment. An owner who knowingly allows his premises to be used for gaming, or as a means of access to a gaming house, is subjected to a very heavy penalty. If he discovers that they are being used for such a purpose he is not only entitled but is bound to determine the lease. These enactments have produced their object far more quickly and effectively than is generally the case with measures of social reform. They were not intended to eradicate the gambling instinct. Some agency other than legislation must do that. But they were intended to restrict the temptations of the young and to limit the opportunities of the hardened gambler. This they have done to a very large extent. So far as one can discover every betting place of any size in Sydney and Melbourne has been closed. skilled detectives found it next to im-

THE WATCHWARD OF WOMEN.

Modesty is woman's vatchward.
Whatever threatens her delicate sense of modesty, frightens her. For this reason many a woman permits diseases of the delicate womanly organs to become aggravated because she cannot bring herself to submit to the ordeal of unpleasant questionings, offensive examinations and obnoxious local treatments, which some physicians find necessary. Doubtless thousands of the woman who have taken advantage of Dr. Pierce's offer of free consultation by letter, have been led to do so by the escape thus offered from a treatment repugnant to modesty. Any sick woman may write to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., in perfect confidence; all letters being treated as strictly private and sacredly confidential, and all answers being sent in plain envelopes with no advertising or other printing, upon them. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has been long hailed as a "God-send to women." It makes weak women strong and sick women well. "Favorite Prescription" contains no alcohol. Cast Has Increased Considerably In Late Years.

The cost of living has within the last few years noticeably increased throughout the civilized world, but more noticeably than anywhere else in Western Canada. To quote a few figures, house rents in Victoria and Vancouver, have advanced on the average at least one-third, if not one-half. Instances could be cited where they have been doubled. Where working men do not own their own homes, it is no uncommon thing for them to pay $30 to $40 a month in Vancouver, and $25 to $30 in Victoria, writes the editor of Westward Ho! Two years ago furnished houses of five or six rooms were plentiful at $30 per month, to-day they are scarce at $50. Similarly the cost of food of every kind has increased to an alarming extent. Fruit is at least twice as dear; meat, milk and even bread have advanced from 20 per cent. to 30 per cent., whilst bacon and cheese are 50 per cent. dearer. These are the staples which every man must buy. Clothing is dearer, although not to the same extent as food and rent, probably 20 per cent. to 25 per cent. would cover thia, but it is doubtful if the quality is not deteriorating. Extras are constantly rising in value. At 50 cents for a shave and haircut, a barber becomes a luxury, and when one reflects that in any English city this service costs the working man but six cents, there is no wonder that Extras are constantly rising in value. At 50 cents for a shave and haircut, a barber becomes a luxury, and when one reflects that in any English city this service costs the working man but six cents, there is no wonder that the newcomer gasps when he receives his check. The consequence is that although high wages are paid the cost of living is proportionately high, and in order to save different methods have to be employed to those which are in vogue in the Old Country. One result is the common practice of letting rooms, or giving meals, which is very general in the West, another is the system by which even married women will take a business position as well as endeavor to discharge their household duties. Western Canada is seeking immigrants; in British Columbia at any rate the population shows but a slight increase. There is an alarming searcity of labor, and the attractions of the province have not hitherto proved sufficient for people of our own race. Warnings proverbially fall on deaf ears, but it cannot be too widely known that in the West, or at any rate in the cities of the West, artificial means are employed to maintain the costs of living st a high level. In this way merchants and workmen play into each other's hands. In order to justify high wages it is necessary to demonstrate that the cost of living is high, so there are combines which keep up the price of fruit, of vegetables, and of meat, to say nothing of milk and bread. Butter, which is retailed at 45 cents and even 50 cents a pound, yields the farmer but 25 cents, within a few miles of the place where it is sold. No one wants to see the West progress hampered by an excessive cost of living. In any event it is only fair that those who are so urgent in their demands for white labor should represent conditions as they actually exist. It hurts the province far more to have a few men come here under the impression that wages are double what they are in England and the costs of living. In any event it is only fair that those who are so urgent in the

M. A. HAGERMAN. Fate of a Prince Albert.

When Commander Peary went on his first trip in search of the pole, he won the gratitude of an Eskimo by presenting him with an ancient Prince Albert coat and an extensively creased sombrero. Years afterward, when again in the north, the explorer received a ceremonial visit from a native and, to his surprise, set eyes once more on the discarded vestments. On the occasion of the commander's next dash for the pole the aborigines took him aside and pointed to a rude mausoleum. By its side stood the disused sledge. Its six dogs had been strangled to make an appropriate funeral. On the pile of stones lay what was left of the Prince Albert coat and the sombraro.

You may use my name as recommending Bu-Ju, for I cannot say enough for

Yours truly,

Indon's oldest hansom cab-driver—that is to say, the oldest cab-driver—still working—is Mr. Jack Heyday, who lives at Islington, and has been fifty-three years engaged in carrying fares about the metropolis. His record became known through a mishap that recently betell him.

He was driving his hansom along Newgate street recently, anxious to pick up a fare, for times are hard with old Heyday, who has a widowed daughter and two young grandchildren to care for. Suddenly his vehicle was caught by a passing van, and the shock of the collision threw the old chap against the back of his "dickey," injuring his spine, so that he is yet unable to resume his occupation.

A police officer seemed to think Heyday was to blame. The latter exclaimed with some heat, "I drove a cab before you were in your cradle." The result of the incident was that he was summoned at the City Summons Court for "wanton driving," and was fined $2, including costs. This was just the amount he had on him—sad nearly all he had in the world—so he paid, rather than have to go to prison.

But he is very sore about it, and when seen by a press representative said: "Tm in my seventh-fourth year; have driven a hansom for fifty-three years, and this is the first time I have been summoned. It's rather hard on me."

Asked if he was the oldest hansom driver in London he varilied. "Year I Asked if he was the oldest hansom driver in London, he replied: "Yes, I think I'm the oldest one still working. There are some older than me.

Philanthropic Sparrows.

For several days four or five sparrows had visited a certain place on the roof near my sparrows. They always brought food for another little fellow, who never tried a flight from the spot. The visiting sparrows never came empty-billed. They would drop tiny morsels of food near the little sparrow. When it began to eat the crumbs the others set up a great chirping and then fiew away.

After watching this for a few days I went out on the roof and approached the lone bird. It did not flutter away from me, and made no resistance when I picked it up.

The sparrow was blind. Its eyes were covered with a milk-like film.

CANADA'S POPULATION.

Immigration Returns Show Increase of 33 Per Cent.

Our population through immigration has again shown a large increase. Almost without our knowledge we are becoming a big people. For the 12 months ending June 30, 1907, the Government returns show the total immigration to have been 252,038. For the same period in the preceding year the number was 189,064. The gain this year was 33 per cent.

Over a quarter of a million new citizens through immigration alone is a big item when we consider that our total population is only six and a half millions. The million and a quarter that the United States receive do not look so many when compared with the eighty million that they already have. The tide of emigration is turned Canadawards, and unless some unforeseen accident occurs, we may expect to see this number grow from year to year.

We have land and opportunities to satisfy all that come. The strip of land lying on each side of the C.P.R. was formerly considered to comprise all the wheat lands of the West. The Canadian Northern ran its line farther north and there were still fertile lands. The G. T. P. goes still farther north and the same report is received. What was formerly a slender belt across the prairies has expanded into a mighty empire waiting but development to yield harvests beyond the imagination of our fathers. There is room there for millions of settlers, where there are now thousands. Only a fraction of the land is under cultivation.

There are opportunities here for the artisan no less than for the agriculturalist. While in the West homesteads are awaiting the farmer, with a soil that requires no clearing to turn it into agricultural land, in the east factories are eagerly looking for work.

steads are awaiting the farmer, with a soil that requires no clearing to turn it into agricultural land, in the east factories are eagerly looking for workmen. Canada must have skilled workmen if she is to take her place in the world's industrial race.

Natural advantages are present, such as few countries enjoy. But the workshops must be manned if the work is to be done. Hitherto this phase of the immigration question has been deliberately shunned by the Government. It is just as necessary as phase of the immigration question has been deliberately shunned by the Government. It is just as necessary as the filling up of our farm lands. The crying need of Canada during the past year has been more skilled workmen.

A discussion of our immigration brings up the subject of the present agitation in British Columbia against the admission of Japanese. We have one advantage, at least, in seeking a solution of the problem. We have an example before our eyes, in the case of the United States, of the admission of a race which cannot be assimilated. Moreover, the Asiaties have been invading the United States for many years, so that the effect of their presence should be now fairly well marked. The quality of our citizens is of first importance. Numbers are of importance, but in any case it is just a question of time with them. But the character of our people is being formed now. If the nation is to be strong in the things that make a people great, the foundation must be laid now.—Industrial Canada.

Maintained.

The Canadian Department of Customs port of entry at Burwell, the harbor to the west of Cape Chudley on Hudson Strait, thereby solving the problem of asserting and maintaining Canadian jurisdiction over Hudson's Bay and the more northerly waters. The first collections of duties were made by Major Moodie, of the Northwest. Mounted Police, three years ago, and were paid willingly by the Scottish whalers operating in the north, and with less readiness by the United States whalers in Hudson's Bay. Duties were exacted only upon such goods as the skippers declared were intended for trading with the Eskimos, ships' stores being untaxed. Since that time there has been no trouble, captains of United States vessels readily complying with the Canadian regulations.

It has been intended to extend the jurisdiction of the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police over the entire Hudson Bay and adjacent districts in Franklin, by means of a series of posts, and to maintain communication between them by means of a patrol steamer. For this purpose the Bouville was built at the Canadian Government shipyard in Sorel. But patrol steamer. For this purpose the Rouville was built at the Canadian Government shipyard in Sorel. But a few weeks ago it was decided that her services would not be required, as the police had established an overland route from Fort Churchill on Hudson Bay to Winnipeg, while the compliance of foreign whaling masters with the customs laws seemed to render the outlay for a patrol vessel unnecessary.

Although whaling in Hudson Bay has fallen off so that the industry is this year prosecuted by but one United States vessel, there are still whaling stations at Frobisher and Cumberland and the Canadian Government is expected to have these northern waters regularly patrolled every summer by a revenue cruifer.

A singular custom prevails among the Tartars or Kurds. If a man gets into difficulties—that is, loses his cattle or other movable property—he pours a little brown sugar into a piece of colored cloth, ties it up and carries one such parcel to each of his friends and acquaintances. In return he is presented, according to circumstances, with a cow or sheep or a sum of money. He is thus at once set upon his legs again. The same method is adopted when a young man wishes to marry, but is not in a position to satisfy the parents of his intended bride in the matter of the "bashlyg"—that is, marriage dower. Only in this case he does not go around himself, but sends a friend or a servant.
