Trinitarianism vs. Socinianism. My Reviewer Reviewed.

RDITOR of POST:—I have waited for my frigad Theologicus to get through with his efficiesm.

Tam pleased with his nom de plume. He does not claim to be a theologian or he would have taken the noun Theologus. He takes an adjective to express that he belongs to flead he did not subscribe "Zenas" That might have been appropriate, but I should have despaired of an ending to this matter; for men of that profession (Titus 5:13) though "vanquished will argue still."

Glad, too, he is not yet a full fledged socinian; notwithstanding the cuption of his article. He admits the atonement and the about the devil existing before Abraham was not necessary and his comment on John 8:58 out of place. I quoted that passage in my sermon to prove Christ's pre-existence. It proves that fact. And I will now say I believe it proves more. The Greek original is much more forcible than the translation. The verb which has an origin ("was born") the other existence absolutely. "I am." Dr. Hovey says of the last: "It is the timeless present and by using it Christ the translation of the same as that used of Christ. The first stignifies existence which has an origin ("was born") the other existence absolutely. "I am." Dr. Hovey says of the last: "It is the timeless present and by using it Christ the translation of the same as that used of Christ. The first stignifies existence which has an origin ("was born") the other existence absolutely. "I am." Dr. Hovey says of the last: "It is the timeless present and by using it Christ was God why did he not glorify himselff Why did he ask the Father to do it Does it not imply subordination to the Father." In different places God asks his people to glorify him. Self Why did he ask the Father to do it Does it not imply subordination to ment But does my learned friend forget there was a mutual glorification between the Father and in the Father and in their perfect oneness what honored the Son honored the Father also.

To place the next paragraph "beyond a question" and to prove "Christ was not only not God but only a creature of God" he quotes Rev. 3:14 "the beginning of the creation of God."

Chas. J. Ellicott, D. D., one of the first Greek scholars of England and chairman of the British company of New Test. revisors says: "The beginning"—"not meaning that Christ was the first among the created, but that He was the origination or primary source of all creation. In short the word beginning like the word faithful" (above) "must be understood in an active sence He has originating powers, acts 3:14 as well as priority of existence." Again I think Theologieus will allow there are two ideas running through the word "arche" in the New Test. and here translated, "beginning," viz. primacy of time and primacy of rank. That of rank or authority is of frequent use, e. g. in Luke 12:11,29:20. I Cor. 15:24. Eph. 1:21 and Titus 3:1 it is rendered "rule" or "ruler." In Rom. 8:38. Eph. 3:10. Col. 1:16. 2:10 and 2:15, it is "principality" or "principalities." Hence I have ever conceived, Rev. 3:14, to seach that Christ is not only the origin of creation but he has supremacy over it. So the passage is in perfect accord with the statement "all power is given to him in heaven and on earth," that "all things are put under his feet" and "he is exalted over all." But till it can be shown that "arche" has for its only wopen' is given to him in heaven and on earth, that "all things are put under his feet" and "he is exalted over all." But till it can be shown that "arche" has for its only wopen' is given to him in heaven and on earth, that "all things are put under his feet" and "he is exalted over all." But till it can be shown that "arche" has for its only wopen' is given to him in heaven and on earth, that "all things are put under his feet" and "he is exalted over all." But till it can be shown that "arche" has for its only wopen.

of the throne of the Majesty in the Heavens" Heb, 8:1.

Then we are referred to Isa. 9:6 and told "It affords a good instance of Trinitarian coloring in translation"; that "the fairest translation would be 'mighty power' instead of Mighty God," and that "the word El in the Original is not the word used for God in the Bible." When I read this I was astonished. I am not a Hebrew scholar. I have read a little Hebrew, but am not such a master of the language as to be able to say what would be "the fairest translation," but I submit two things: 1st Theologicus sets himself against the best Hebrew scholars of the age and 2nd, his "fairest translation" is very unfair. And 1st: the best Hebrew scholars of the age with the most ancient manuscript before them, were engaged on the work of the Revised Version. They translated Isa. 9:6 "And his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace." In a foot note for "Everlasting Father" they say "Father of Eternity."

In view of the fact that these men represent

B. 2nd; when he says "El in the origin

my astonishment increases. What does h mean? Why that is not only unfair, but in correct. Had he said it is not the only word it would have been true. The wor Elahim. a. \(\pi_1\) is very frequently used. By he knows the word Elohim is a plural noun, and so implies more than one. So John Xeres a converted Jew, nearly 200 years ago published his reasons for becoming a Christian, 2ln speaking of the unity of the Godhead to asks "Why else is that frequent mention of God by means of the plural member as in Gen. 1:1 where the word Elohim denotes several persons in the same Divine nature or essence." So in Gen. 1:26 Jehovah said "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." Kings in modesty may use the plural to denote the concurrence of their council, but who except Christ "has known the mind of the Lord or been his counsellor"?

known the mind of the Lord or been his counsellor? But if the readers of the Post have received, from Theologicus, the impression that "£I is not the word used for God in the Bible" and that the translation has only been given here by Trinitarian influence or "forgery," I have to say it is not correct. Who is responsible for the impression, the writer or the readers, I leave them to say I have not had time to go through the whole Bible in search for the passage where £I is translated God, neither would space allow to publish all I have found, "give a few examples, it is in Psa. 18:3,31, 22:2,11, 33:49, 36:7, 68:21, &c., &c. In Isa. 5:16, 8:10 9:6, 10:21, 12:2, &c. A little strange that in the 8th and 10th chapters, it should be correct and be a forgery in the 9th of Isa. But there is something said about its being "a poetical meaning." Well I never thought the book of Gen. or any of the pentateuch was very "poetical." But £I is rendered
