The Canadian Suspects.

RELEASED WITHOUT EXAMINATION.

Cornelius and Matthew Flaherty, on a recent visit to Ireland, were captured by the Irish police and locked up on suspicion of being implicated in the murder of Lord Cavendish and Mr. Burke, have given a full description of their experience as Canadian suspects. Cornelius, in an interview, says:—On the afternoon of the 11th of July, shortly after having finished dinner, we were sitting comfortably in a room in the house of our aunt at Ballyduff, when we were rather surprised to see three officers step into the house. One of them walked up to each of us and tapped us on the shoulder, saying, "You're my prisoner in the Queen's name." This was about four o'clock in the afternoon of Tuesday, and we asked the cause of our arrest, but no reason was given. We were then taken to Ballyduff, and kept in custody until 11.30 in the evening, when they came to take us away again. (Cornelius) objected to go out at that late hour on account of Mat's delicate health, but they paid no attention to what we said, and we were compelled to go to Linstead, some nine miles away. On reaching that place we were lodged in the police station, where they wanted to lock me in the cell, but Mat said he would accompany me, and so they let me stop in an outer room. We were kept here until one o'clock on the following afternoon, when we were taken upstairs to the office of Mr. Massie, the magistrate. There was no examination at all, but the magistrate told us we were remanded for eight days until they could get further evidence of our being concerned in the murder of Cavendish and Burke. Then we produced the certificates given to us before we left the city by Mayor Meredith and having the seal of the city of London, but they said anyone could write that, sneered at the papers, and hardly looked at the credentials. They next marched us off to Tralee goal, which we found in a dirty, filthy condition. The fare was very poor, and the dishes seemed not to have been cleaned for a long time. When the doors of the prisoners' cells were opened the stench was terrible, and could hardly be borne at first. The tea they gave us was served in a dirty tin, and was so greasy and bad that it served the purpose of both physics and medicine. The first time I drank it I became sick, and was ill for three days from the effects of drinking the stuff. We were kept in confinement from Tuesday until the following Friday, when we were released, and the officers said they were sorry to cause us so much trouble, but we told them if they had examined our papers there would have been no need for the trouble.

After our release we enjoyed a very good time with our friends. It had been our intention to visit nearly all the points of interest in Ireland, and also to go to England, but we were afraid to leave the place where we were for fear that we might be arrested again on some other charge without foundation. So we could not go anywhere until we made up our minds to come home, and we left Ireland on the 29th ult., disgusted with the way we had been used in our native land. The soldiers and constables are themselves the cause of all the trouble in Ireland, and no stranger travelling there is safe from imprisonment.—Toronto Globe.

Abolition.

Think of the manager of the Nazareth telegraph office turning to an operator with the enquiry, "Can you raise Bethlehem?" yet this may happen any day.

The house described by Thackeray in "Estimond" is that in which the late Dante Gabriel Rossetti lived in Chyne Walk, Chelsea, and is the oldest in the Walk.

The people of Long Branch are entitled to great credit for the moral uprightness which enables them to acknowledge that the whale recently cast up on the shore near the resort is only fifteen feet long.

A fellow lost a breach of promise suit in New York recently because he addressed the girl who sued him as "My dear darling little sugar plum." In the eye of the law that is going a little too far to back out.

"I'm glad Billy had sense enough to marry a settled old maid," said grandma Winkham, at the wedding. "Gals is so lighity, and widders is so kinder over-ruin' and upsettin'. Old maids is thankful and willin' to please."

Once when Miss Caroline Sedgwick, the New England authoress was in England, an aristocratic lady asked her: "Have you any large old trees in America?" "Oh, I beg your pardon, your country has not been settled long enough for that."

There is a town in the northern part of Massachusetts where the girls are so abundant and the beaux are so scarce, that when a visit from a young man is expected the road by which he approaches is picketed by females for a number of miles, each anxious to have the first glimpse with him.

A modern writer observes that "in a certain sense all attractive females are more or less girls. A man always approaches a girl dressed in society politeness, that it is the girl's duty to pierce the thin coating of sugar and plum, and learn what is beneath. She cannot not accomplish this without flirting."

Quebec allies.

Le Canadien (Conservative) came out on the 9th inst. as a strenuous advocate of the Liberal policy of retrenchment as regards our Provincial finances, and argues that the utmost prudence should be exercised with respect to our resources and credit until we have equalized our revenue and expenditure. It claims that over $100,000 are now uselessly squandered each year in connection with the Legislature and the Civil Service alone, and says that in a single department whose contingencies did not amount to more than $500 or $700 a year they now amount to more than $5,000. This it styles organized robbery and regular rapine. It thinks Mr. Mousseau will have great trouble to carry out any serious schemes of reform in this connection, as extravagance and an inordinate use of patronage have become regularly engrained upon our system, and upon a Province which unfortunately can poorly support its actual indebtedness so terrible a strain. The evil being that the departmental heads administer, not from the standpoint of the general interest, but that of party exigencies. It believes, however, that while it is useless to expect the Legislature to take the initiative in correcting these fearful abuses, a man with sufficient courage at the head of affairs could readily cut the Gordian knot of the whole trouble, and would not appeal to the public in vain to support him. It adds that it understands this to be the first duty of any premier of this Province at the present juncture, and assumes it to be Mr. Mousseau's intention to try to discharge it in taking the Provincial control in an actual crisis. Le Canadien's utterances constitute a terrible arraignment of the Conservative mis-government of Quebec since Confederation and are also a signal vindication of Mr. Joly's retrenchment policy, which Le Canadien was among the foremost to ridicule at the time as chesee-paring.

SIR HECTOR JEALOUS.

There are evidently all the elements of a nice little family quarrel in the composition of the present Ottawa combination, at least as regards its Quebec section, and all the denials of the Conservative organs as to the non-existence of any jealousy between Sir Hector Langevin and Mr. Chapleau may be taken for what they are worth. Le Courrier de Canada and other Langevinite sheets are here incensed because another of their political kidney at Ottawa, Le Canadien, has had the hardihood to say in a burst of enthusiasm that from the outset of his career Mr. Chapleau has been marked out as the successor of Sir George Cartier, and they petulently demand if the party has not already a recognized chief in Sir Hector Langevin.

A conjugal catechism: "What is the whole duty of a married man?" "To be agreeable to his wife." "What is the whole duty of a married woman?" "To be agreeable."

You don't often hear of a self-made woman. Fact is, as a lady friend assures us, no woman who had her own making would make herself a woman.

It is said that the canceling and stamping of letters will soon be done by machinery, a Boston man having invented a machine which is now being used in 30 offices.
