What it Meant

Only a line in the newspaper, That somebody read aloud At a table of languid boarders To a dull, indifferent crowd. Market reports and a marriage, And the reader read them all. How could he know a hope died them

And was wrapt in a funeral pall ; Only a line in the paper, Read in a usual way.

But the glow went out of a fair young life And left it cold and gray.

Colder than bleak December Grayer than walls of rock ; The reader paused and the room grew full Of laughter and idle talk.

If one slipped off to her chambe Why who would dream or know That one brief line in the paper Had sent her away with her woe

Away into a lonely sorrow, To bitter and blinding tears? Only a line in the paper ! But it meant such desolate years.
