

THE STUBBORNNESS of the MULE is proverbial. Though not proverbial it is a well-known fact that millions of housewives who have tried SUNLIGHT SOAP stubbornly refuse to use any other. These housewives, as their ally, can look forward to wash-day without dread, for they are assured of a quick despatch of all dirt.

LIFE IN BERLIN.

A prominent South American public man recently returned from a somewhat lengthy visit to Berlin, and wrote a letter to the Times, describing what he saw and heard, and telling the opinion he had formed of the German situation in general. His letter makes most interesting reading.

Life in Berlin is not very agreeable, chiefly on account of the absence of news and the great difficulty which exists of communicating with the rest of the world. The foreign element has almost disappeared from Berlin hotels. The traffic of motor cars in the streets has diminished, and the aristocratic Unter den Linden is little frequented; the avenues of the Tiergarten are similarly abandoned. At every turn one runs against people in mourning or else soldiers who are wounded, isolated or in groups of eight or ten, accompanied by Red Cross nurses, who take them for walks in the parks, etc. People in the city meanwhile frequent the cafes, theatres, etc., more or less as usual, but the dancing saloons have been closed, dancing being prohibited. Anything French is tabooed, and really Berlin deprived of the "chic Parisien" and the "English correct cut" is not an enchanting spectacle. Nowadays the foreigner in Berlin hardly experiences a sense of absolute security; to talk a foreign tongue is to attract immediate attention.

But if superficially life in Berlin goes on as usual one should not look only as far as this to judge of the effect of the war on Berlin; to do so would be to judge of a corpse by its apparent tranquillity without taking into account the decomposition taking place below the surface. In the origin and source of all her power, her industries, her enormous foreign trade, Germany is being slowly bled to death. Banking transactions with the outside world are paralysed, and it is only on talking with business men that one can realise what Germany is losing, or judge of the enormous labor which the British Navy has accomplished for the benefit of the Allied cause. Germany is beginning to run short of many much-needed articles, among them copper, rubber, nitrate, etc., for which high prices are offered; all motor tires, for example, are now commandeered for Government use.

All this explains the great and ever-growing hatred for perfidious Albion, which has reached such a pitch that the hatred against France tends to

WE HAVE MADE A CLOSE STUDY of time and labor-saving devices for business places and offices and we are sure that office appliances of the famous diminish, and one now hears occasionally friendly allusions to a time in the not far distant future when France will form a quadruple alliance with Germany, Austria and Turkey. Nevertheless, the hatred for things English does not extend as far as the pounds sterling, sovereigns being much in demand at Marks 28-25, with a rising tendency.

But with all the hatred there is no one in Germany that doubts the incomparable and even heroic valour with which the French and English have fought, and the "contemptible little English Army" has been converted into a black nightmare to torment the dreams of the Kaiser and his Staff. Every returned soldier, be he officer or man, brings with him unbounded admiration for the clan of the French and the coolness and iron resistance of the British.

A German officer confessed to me that to capture a French or English trench was most difficult. The construction of these trenches is such that they offer practically no mark for the great German guns; "often," said this officer, "we would reach the first line of trenches only to find the enemy had retired to a second line, from which he poured a withering fire upon our men, who offered a splendid target; if England, at the start of hostilities, had been able to put a million men in the field we should before this have been fighting on German soil."

One sees little by little the wane of their belief in the infallibility of their Army. To-day all their fury is directed across the North Sea, towards the country they are sure of invading. I have listened to many plans for this invasion, but none worthy of serious repetition. No, unless the waters of the Channel behave like those of the Red Sea, England is safe from German menace as she is from the dog that bays the moon. It's a long way to Tipperary, but longer still to London!

It is not from one of the papers which translate the publications of the German War Bulletin, nor from the newspapers themselves, that one can glean the true march of the war. The Berlin public is deprived of all news of German defeats, except such as it is impossible to hide, but the greater part of the adversities—the failures and the horrible sufferings of the soldiers—are kept from the public. During my stay in Germany I had many opportunities of seeing soldiers on the march and to note the difference between them and the Allied troops; the German soldier lacks the ardent spirit which inflames the English or French troops, who go to war cheerfully in defence of all they hold most dear; but in the German soldier is the frigid and calculating soul of the Germanic race, and it pushes this mass of men toward something which they have been taught to believe since infancy as a biological necessity, fatal and inevitable. Soon, no doubt, they will have occasion to convince themselves of the error of their unhealthy doctrines. I return convinced that in spite of all her efforts, great though these be beyond all ponderation, Germany will be beaten, and if the war goes to a finish the military power of Kaiserdom will be buried for the remainder of the century.

While the writer of the above is evidently an outspoken opponent of German pretensions, yet he is evidently a keen observer, and his letter is the most valuable communication yet received from the enemy's country.

Casks of Petrol for Submarines on Bottom of the Sea.

Sunken Tanks of Gasoline Found by British Since North Sea Fight.

Ronaoko, Virg., Feb. 14.—English fishing craft (trawlers) are being withdrawn from their work of clearing mines in the North Sea to Falmouth, according to a cablegram received this afternoon from J. H. Bennett, news editor of the Ronaoko Times, who is perhaps the only newspaper man to accompany a relief cargo destined for the Belgian sufferers from this point of assemblage to its point of distribution. Mr. Bennett went from Norfolk to Rotterdam on the Lynoria, the ship assigned by the Belgian commission to carry contributions from Virginians.

The cable continues: "Falmouth is looking forward to the arrival of these small fishing craft, who are to make that port their headquarters, with supplies. The transfer of the boats to the west coast was made known today when a British officer, in an unguarded moment, explained they were to drag the west of England for the casks of petrol known to have been planted a few days prior to the outbreak of hostilities by German merchantmen. These casks, filled with petrol were sunk, according to this officer, in the neighbourhood of Falmouth, and their position carefully charted. Some of the casks filled with petrol have been found by the trawlers' drags, and a systematic search for others has been organized by the British government.

For this purpose two hundred of the trawlers have been ordered to concentrate at Falmouth and drag the entire coast. In the course of the British army's officers conversation the mystery which has hitherto prevailed of how a German submarine could separate so far from a base of supplies, one of the principal things being petrol, was explained. The presence of the sunken tanks of gasoline had been discovered by the Britons since the big sea fight in the North Sea. It was explained, and every effort to locate the tanks was being taken.

Egyptians Loyal. They Have Faith in the British.

Cairo, Feb. 15 (despatch to the London Daily Chronicle).—During the last week or two, and particularly when fighting was proceeding beyond the Suez Canal, excellent opportunity has been afforded to note the attitude of the Egyptian population toward the Germanized Turkish Empire and toward England. Cairo is the city of tilltates and in its bazaars rumors start easily and flourish with extraordinary rapidity. It was in this soil that the Germans endeavoured, as all the world now knows, to plant the seeds of intrigue, hoping to reap a harvest of disloyalty and rebellion. During the recent events it has been clearly shown how fruitless their expensive and assiduous efforts have been. Though rumors were spread through the bazaars last week that the Turks had crossed the canal at Suez and Ismailia, the native population refused to be moved, but remained absolutely quiet, not giving the authorities a moment's anxiety. The people were convinced that the official communiques told them the truth as to the situation, and they thoroughly believed that the Turks suffered a severe defeat and that Egypt was absolutely safe from the invaders.

The policy of England in dealing fairly and openly with the people in contradistinction to the duplicity and muddle of the Turkish rulers has yielded excellent results, and in tranquillity and perfect order has had inevitable and satisfactory reward.

The Egyptian press continues to express deep satisfaction that Egypt is so efficiently protected by England, and that this enables the new Sultan and Government to devote attention even during the great world crisis to problems of domestic importance to the Nile land.

Splitting Pains in the Muscles Driven Out Quickly by "Nerviline."

Rheumatic Pains Go—Suffering Cases—Cure Comes in Even Chronic Cases.

For aching bones and sore muscles nothing will soothe away the pain like Nerviline.

For nerve-racking twinges in the muscles, for torturing backache or lumbago, you'll find Nerviline is full of amazing power.

You see, Nerviline has the power—it's about five times stronger than ordinary remedies, and can penetrate very deeply. It contains juices and extracts of certain herbs that give it a strange power to drive out congestion, inflammation or pain.

You are safe in using Nerviline. Just rub it on—it won't blister or burn, and can do nothing but good.

Whenever there is pain or suffering Nerviline will go and will drive it out. It penetrates to every cell of a sore muscle; it sinks to the heart of every stiff sore joint; it searches out the pain of rheumatism quickly.

Give Nerviline a trial. See how fast it will limber your lame back, how quickly it will cure neuralgic headache, how fast it will break up a bad cold or ease a sore throat.

The best family pain-remedy ever made is Nerviline. Forty years of great success proves this.

For emergent illa, when the doctor isn't handy, there is nothing better than the 50c. family size bottle; trial size 25c., all dealers.

The Planet Venus.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Sitwah" The planet Venus is a 160 carat star of the first water, which may be seen, free of charge, in the western sky each evening, during a large part of each month.

During the rest of the month, Venus exhibits in the morning before sunrise. According to the testimony of several thousand milkmen, it is a very fine sight.

Venus is only a trifle smaller than the earth, being 7,828 miles in diameter. It is, however, much younger and may not have gotten its growth. Telescope chauffeurs tell us that a 100 pound man would only weigh 120 pounds on Venus. However, no astronomer has as yet discovered how much a ton of coal would weigh on Venus, and until this is discovered, emigration to that planet is bound to be very small.

Astronomers should strive to confine themselves to useful investigations.
