science to lower them. American bi-metal-lists did not claim that making the two metals a legal tender would scenre stability in prices, but they asserted that free coin-age over a wide area would result in fluctuations in the values of gold and silver being inconsiderable. They fully admitted that the demands of the myriads of people in the East might, in case of a harvest of abundance is increase case of a harvest of abundance, so increase the demand for silver bills as to bring silver to a slight premium over gold; but the fact that the competition for whichever metal became even fractionally cheaper would sustain the values of the metals had not been questioned at the conference. The mono-metallists of Lombard street, when confronted with this argument, spoke of the mountains of silver they were told were about to be discovered, which would swamp the market with silver bills sufficient not only to overwhelm the demand of Europe, but also to inflate the silver currencies.

A young man named Laffes attempted to separate the combatants, and was shot by Slavia in the breast. Slavin then fied, and was met by Constable Davey, who attempted to arrest him, with the assistance of a man named Lefevre. The latter caught Slavin, and wihile holding him was shot in the left shoulder. Slavin then broke away, only to be seized by Davey. He pointed his revolver straight at the constable's breast and fired, the bullet passing through the policeman's body, killing him instantly. Slavin was captured by the crowd and narrowly escaped lynching. The trial took place on October 12, when he was convicted and sentenced to death. Lefevre and Laffes both recovered.

CANADA'S REJOINDER.

Finance Minister Foster's Cogent Reply to the United States Secretary of State.

The Latter's Gross Misrepresentations of Fact-His Highly Misleading Deductions.

OTTAWA, Dec. 16.-Hon. George E. Foser, Dominion minister of finance, has made rejoinder to Hon. John W. Foster, secretary of state of the United States, who replied to the former's criticisms of President Harrison's message. He said to a reporter to-day : "After reading Mr. Foster's observations I can state that I have nothing to add to my previous assertions in regard to the reciprocity negotiations on the subject of a uniform tariff between the two countries. When the proposition for reciprocity in natural products was declined, and before a wider arrangement was discussed the Canadian delegation in a subject to the condition of the condition hands of the United States Express company, consigned to the sub-treasury at Chicago, and are expected to leave on the Columbia express over the Pennsylvania railway at 4:20 p.m.

San Francisco, Dec. 16.—In the trial of San the Canada would be free to arrange her own tariff on wools. This article is on the free list, and in the United Santages. States it is highly taxed. To this Secretary Blaine replied very emphatically that the United States had a heavy duty on wools, and if Canada fixed separate duties the pro-posed reciprocity arrangement would be simply non-effective.

Now I must admit that I was surprised that Secretary Foster said that Canada made, as a basis of settlement of the canal question, the free navigation of the Hudson river by Canadians. So far as my knowledge goes, the Canadians never made free navigation a sine qua non for the settlement of the canal dispute. At the Washington conference, in June last, an informal proposition was made that the controversy might be settled by the U. S. allowing Canada the sition was made that the controversy might be settled by the U. S. allowing Canada the free navigation of the Hudson in return for Canadians withdrawing their refusal to grant rebates on grain transhipped at U. S. lake ports. Anybody can see that this falls short of a basis of settling the whole controversy. Our informal offer was declined, thereupon a new proposition was discussed and promised consideration. It was formally conveyed to the United States Government through the British States Government through the British charge d'affaires at Washington. It is believed that serious international trouble will grow out of the San Ignacio outrage if the United States government does not show its disapproval of the act of the revolutionists by putting a large body of troops in the field after the perpetrators and their sympathisers. The Mexican government is strengthening its already large force of soldiers on the border by rushing about 2,000 troops to the turbulent section from the interior garrisons.
