The Langley deer shooting case is up again for appeal. Douglas Symington was recently fined $38 25 for shooting deer during the close season. The case had been appealed on the grounds that Mr. Symington killed the deer when they were grazing on the property of Geo. Goddard, a property worked on shares by himself and his son Richard. Both lived a mile from the place, but Mr. Symington was authorized by Geo. Goddard to kill the deer, and Richard Goddard accepted one of them for his own use, and told them to go on killing them. In spite of this he was tried and fined. Judg-
