NANAIMO, April 15.—An inquest on the body of William Moore was held in the old court room yesterday, when the jury returned a verdict that the late William Moore came to his death, by the falling of rock and coal while at work in the letter complained of by Mr. Martin's later of the purchaser, and reflection on the letter complained of by Mr. Martin states that the late of the purchaser, when the letter complained of by Mr. Martin states that "it made no difference." I told him to let me know if he wanted the order to inspect and I would give it to him. He then left the office. Without, of course, any reflection on the letter complained of by Mr. Martin states that "it made no difference." I told him to let me know if he wanted the order to inspect and I would give it to him. He then left the office. osition Mr. Barnard did in this matter, e. holding a chattel mortgage upon a ecurity, which security had been, after lefault of payment of principal and all interest, transferred to a third party without any knowledge on the part of such client, consulting Mr. Martin professionally, would he not advise him to mmediately take active proceedings as he was empowered to take under the terms of his mortgage, to recover payment of the amount justly due him? By answering the above questions Mr. Martin may aid your readers to arrive at a proper understanding of this matter.

MR. MARTIN REPLIES.

INQUIRER.

To THE EDITOR:-In your issue of this morning an anonymous person takes part in the correspondence which passed between Mr. Barnard and myself under our own names. This is not "playing the game," and the letter of "Conser playing vative" is another instance of the fact that when anonymity appears veracity disappears. It is a pity that "Conservative" does not even agree with Mr. Barnard in his statement of facts. Mr. Barnard says. to use his own words, "Fortunately for me the Sentinel was lately purchased by Mr. Hewitt Bostock." now says that this is only "half of the truth." and that Mr. Bostock employed Mr. Bailey to act for him in the negotiations. It seems that I was wrong in taking Mr. Barnard's statement as correct. Or perhaps Mr. Rarnard will say I am wrong in accepting "Conserva tive's" account of the transaction. I leave them to fight it out between them-

There is no doubt about my statement. I said "the purchaser ed the liabilities, and that I had seen the covenant in the instrument indemnifying the original proprietors, the vendors, from Mr. Barnard's claim, the result of which was to make Mr. Barnard's claim a good one, while formerly it was risky. If Mr. Barnard is right and Mr. Bostock was the purchaser, my statement is correct. If Mr. Barnard is wrong, and "Conservative" is right that Mr. Bostock employed an agent in the matter my statement is still correct; Mr. Bostock would be responsible for the act of his agent. The fact remains the same in either case: the risky security became a good one and the purchaser, whoever he was, principal or agent, carried out his covenant with the original proprietors and paid off Mr. Barnard. Conservative "should have taken the precaution before writing to your paper o rehearse the facts with Mr. Barnard and I may say that when he stated that Mr. Bostock purchased the Sentinel he stated what was correct; consequently I felt that in answering his letter any atwould have been nothing less than a quibble on my part, which would have aid me open to justly adverse criticism. I regret that "Conservative" in discussing the matter should have so departed from honorable methods as to deliberately misquote me in order to gain a temporary mean advantage. He says Mr. Martin was called upon to-day to produce the document to which he reerred and which he said could be seen y anyone. It sufficeth to say that the document in question was not at hand." A reference to my letter will prove that what I said was: "I shall be happy to procure the document

But I wish to be fair to Mr. Barnard, in question for anyone who wishes to see it." I was careful to use the word "pro-cure" to show it was not "at hand." So much for this false assertion and the discreditable inference drawn from it. Yesterday morning Mr. Cecil Ward, in Kamloops, and asked him if I should send for it at once for him. He said not to progressing. I may further say publicly, what I have often said privately, that Mr. Bostock is a true and kindly friend and in common with many others and, in common with many others whom he has befriended, I do not forget he helping hand he gave me when I first came to make my home in Victoria.
