THE ORLEANIST PRINCES.

The Orleanists of to-day are divided into two sections, the "Fusionists," who base their Orleanism upon the return of the Count de Chambord to France and who are content to make the collateral branch the residuary legatees of Henri V.; and the "Anti-Fusionists," who are for some more proximate solution in the shape of an Orleanist Presidency of the Republic which should pave the way for the accession of the Comte de Paris. According to the Voltaire, the Duc de Nemours is, after the Comte de Parls himself, the chief inspirer of the "Fusionists." It was the Duke himself who brought about the visit of the Comte de Paris to Frohsdorff. The other chief personages of this group are the Duke and Prince de Broglie, M. Estancelin and M. Rousse, the eminent lawyers whose able refutation of the March decree for the Expulsion of the Religious Orders will always remain as a living proof of the infamous bad faith of the spurious Republicans of to-day. The chief journalists of the "Fusionists" are M. Louis Teste and M. Leveden, of the Figure, whose articles are always signed "Ph. de Grandieu." M. Louis Teste is probably the most entertaining writer on ec-clesiastical subjects in Europe. Bis. Preface du Conclave and latterly his Leon XIII. are full of that ripe knowledge of men and things and delicate humor which are perhaps the best qualities to be found in a lay Catholic arthor. 'The "Anti-Fusionists" are headed by the Duo d'Aumale and the Duc de Chartres. Their object is to work from a Republican basis similar to that of Louis Napoleon in 1848. An Oriennist Presidency of the Republic would soon develop into an Oriennist monarchy, and if the Duc d'Aumale were Grand Constable of France, it is probable that he would speedily and joyfully make way for the Comte de Paris. The chief writer on the "Anti-Fusionist," side is M. Edouard Herve, editor of the Soleii, who is the personal friend of the Comte de Paris and the godfather of his children. The chief members of the group are the Duo Decazes, the Duo d'Audiffret Pasquier, M. Cuvillier Fleury, the Academician, and formerly tutor of the Duc d'Aumsle; and lastly, M. Joly, the former professor of the Duc de Guise and the Prince de Conde. These hints on the present condition of the Orleanists may be useful at a moment when the party is again becoming prominent and when France may at any moment weary of being ruled by adventurers and may nified ruler, whether King or President. At Lima another war contribution of two thousand silver soles each has been levied on filty Peruviane, and and and and a A v

ARTICLES, EASILY MADE THAT, ARE BOTH USEFUL AND ORNAMENTAL.

A novel and costly carpet is made entirely of Eastern rugs, three of equal length forming the centre, while the border is composed of rugs of a slightly different design, and with deeper combinations of color.

Arrasene now figures conspicuously in art needle-work. It is particularly effective in the working of such flowers as the golden rod, mignonette, etc., or in representing heraldic devices which are to be worked in relief.

Plaster casts take gilding or bronze paint well, and if framed in black or plush look extremely well upon a light wall-paper. The little images sold in the streets for a trifle can be converted by the use of bronze pow-der into really effective ornaments.

Excellent scrap-baskets are now made of Japanese umbrellas. The modus operandi is simple. Rows of chenille are looped from spoke to spoke, and the point of the opened umbrella fixed in a stand. The addition of a bright bow and ends of satin ribbon makes a pretty finish.

Home decorators are achieving great things with the aid of common pottery paint, which, applied to wet wood, gives it an ebonized appearance. Carved figures and bracket supports can be bought very cheaply in common wood, and with their aid mantels and cabinets can be made at home which will prove highly decorative.

"A "new departure" in mantel lambrequins constate in embroidering a scattered design upon the material which covers the board itself, as well as upon the hanging. Such a design in raised work in flowers has a natural appearance, as if the blossoms had been scattered loosely and left there by accident.

Very inexpensive screens can be made at home by covering an ordinary clothes-horse or common wooden frame with dark felt or plush, upon which Chinese crape pictures can be mounted. If the cloth is fastened within the margin of the work the latter can be ebonized, and a nice finish given to the screen by a beading of cherille where the cloth is

In England window curtains of stained glass, for the lower half of the window, are becoming usual, and are a very great improvement upon the ugly structures of woven wire and wicker which have done service for so long a time. "those who know," assert that these particularly pretty additions to the window will soon be equally usual in New York residences

A pretty hall corner is easily made by the help of a carpent r. Corner shelves may be fitted into either side opposite the entrance, and serve to hold an ornamental pot with creeping plant or a bowl with gold fish. Such a niche, if prettily draped, could be a very great help in brightening up the hallway, which is apt, in small houses, to be gloomy and depressing in effect.

The Germans cultivate lvy in their rooms with great success. Placing a root in a large pot by one side of a window, they will train it as it grows until it forms a pretty frame for the entire window, At Fordham there is a drug store in which ivy has been trained completely across the ceiling, passing both windows. The root from which it originated was brought from Westminster Abbey to this country several years ago.

The open fireplace, which is now universal in new houses, has become the subject of much attention. In the latest styles the facings are of exquisitely worked brass and enamel, while centrepleces of porcelain and ornamental flowers in the same material add to the decorative effect. Tiles representing a series of incidents or landscapes form the hearth, while a fender of curious brass work It is a preparation of pure and healthy ingredients, used for the purpose of raising and shortening, calculated to do the best work at least possible cost.
