

C O P Y.

Sir Arthur Currie,
Principal, McGill University,
Montreal, Que.

Dear Sir:-

I respectfully ask you to read the following objections to the course in Pharmacology.

1. Professor Barbour's lectures are very uninteresting and in most case incomprehensible.
2. His command of the English language is very limited, his pronunciation poor, and he rarely manages to get through a sentence without stumbling and repeating himself so much that his meaning is lost.
3. He rushes through the Monday and Thursday lectures in order to be able to waste the Friday period in a kindergarten quiz
4. He often lectures over the hour making it very difficult to get to the following clinics on time.
5. Owing to the general dissatisfaction with his lectures the class sent a delegation to him to ask for a comprehensible summary of his course. He flatly refused.

If you could find time to come and sit through one of his miserable lectures you would be able to see these things for yourself.
