GLACIER HOUSE,

the next resting-place, is situated in the heart of the Selkirks, at the foot of "Sir Donald," and in close proximity to the Great Glacier—a sea of ice spreading among the mountains, and covering an area of about thirty-eight square miles.

The hotel is built beside the railway, in a beautiful amphitheatre surrounded by lofty mountains, of which Sir Donald, rising 8,000 feet above the railway, is the most prominent. Northward stand the summit peaks of the Selkirks in grand array, all clad in snow and ice, and westward is the deep valley of the glacier-fed Illeciliwaet River, leading away to its junction with the Columbia. The dense forests all about are filled with the music of restless brooks, which will irresistibly attract the trout fisherman, and the hunter for large game can have his choice of "big horns," mountain goats, grizzly and mountain bears. The main point of interest is the Great Glacier, which is only a short walk from the hotel by a pleasant and easy path. One may safely climb upon its wrinkled surface, or penetrate its water-worn caves, and think himself in grottos carved in emerald or sapphire. The glacier is about five hundred feet thick at its forefoot, and is said to exceed in area all the glaciers of Switzerland combined.

No tourist should fail to stop here for a day at least, and he need not be surprised to find himself loth to leave its attractions at the end of a week or month.

The hotel is similar in construction to the Mount Stephen House, and is first-class in all respects. The rates are three dollars per day, and correspondence should be addressed to

H. A. PERLY, Manager,

Glacier House, British Columbia.

THE FRASER CANON HOUSE

(rates three dollars per day, E. J. ERMATINGER, Manager), at North Bend, 130 miles east of Vancouver, is situated in a park-like opening among the mountains on the Fraser River; its construction is of the Swiss chalet style, similar to the Mount Stephen and Glacier Houses, and it is managed with the same attention to the comfort of its patrons that pervades all branches of the Company's service. The scenery all along the Fraser River is not only interesting, but startling. It has been well described as "ferocious," and the hotel is a comfortable base from which to explore the surrounding mountains and valleys.

HOTEL VANCOUVER,

at Vancouver, B.C., the Pacific coast terminus of the Railway. The Company have just completed this magnificent hotel, designed to accommodate the large commercial business of the place, as well as the great number of tourists who will always find it profitable and interesting to make here a stop of a day or two, whether travelling east or west. It is situated on high ground near the centre of the city, and from it there is a glorious outlook in every direction. No effort has been spared in making its accommodations and service perfect in every detail, and in the matters of cuisine, furnishings and sanitary arrangements it will compare favorably with the best hotels in eastern Canada or the United States.

Rates: three to five dollars per day, with special terms for a longer time.

Vancouver, B. C.

DRIARD HOUSE,

Victoria, B. C. This hotel is so well known by all travellers to the North Pacific coast as to require but little description in these pages. Its ownership and management are not connected with the Railway, and all communications should be addressed to Messrs. HARTNAGLE & REDON, Managers. The house is large and well furnished, having undergone recent alterations and improvements, and it is conveniently situated near the business centre of the city. The special elegance of its table d'hôte has made the house widely famous.
