THE FASHION FORECAST.

All skirts show concession to the bouffant silhouette in side drapery. Cascades of lace draped scarfs of chiffon, and knife-pleated panniers of charmeuse or meteor are effective methods of distending the hip-line without sacrificing the symmetrical modeling of the figure.

Customary Fee.
Dear Miss Grey.—Kindly let me know what it is customary to pay the minister for performing a wedding ceremony.

I think I noticed it in your column a couple of years ago. Would oblige me very much to have this soon as possible. Thanking you, A READER.

P. S.—Could you also send me a reprint, entitled "There's something in the British After all."

THE MYSTERY SOLVED.

Tinker Bob was becoming more and more interested in the whereabouts of Jack the Wood Rat. He thought it wise, however, not to show any undue interest in the matter, lest Mr. Wood Rat might be watching for some hiding

"Suppose the people didn't want you to live in their house?" said Tinker Bob.

"Oh, if they don't want us to live with them, we keep quiet and live there anyway because we only use the house at night. Some folks call us the 'Trade Rats' because we take some of their things and leave their things in ours."

"Oh," said Mr. Wood Rat, "you know I sleep all day long and come out at night to work while others sleep. If I should work in the daytime that saucy Red Fox might come along and catch me."

the Forest. "What did you hear last night?" he asked.

"I heard 'Pat, pat, pat,' on my chamber floor," replied Tinker Bob.

"You are surely a wise King. How did you know it was I who visited you?"

"It is hard to fool the King," said Tinker Bob.

"Indeed it must be. I didn't suppose you would understand what 'Pat, pat, pat,' meant. We do that to frighten our enemies and to signal our friends," said Mr. Wood Rat.

"Well, come when you like, but remember the law of the great forest. Don't steal from your friend."

"I Heard 'Pat, pat, pat,' on my chamber floor," replied Tinker Bob.
