HAS FRENCH EXPLORER

Dr. Jean Chascot En Route to Civilization After Two Years in the Antarctic Wilderness.

BUENOS AYRES, Feb. 10 ..- The captain of the steamer Sud, which arrived at Punta Arenas to-day, reports that he spoke the Antarctic exploring steamer Pourquoi Pas, anchored at Port Gallant, in the Strait of Magellan. Dr. J. M. Charcot refused any information concerning the results of the French south polar expedition.

It is nearly two years since Dr. Jean Charcot left on his expedition. Early in May of last year word came from him to Paris, giving the news that his ship, the Pourquoi Pas, left Deception Island, a small body of land on the south side of the South Shetland group, lying in latitude 63 south, on Christmas Day, 1908, and that he expected to pass the winter, which would be the time of our last summer, on Alexander Land, which lies to the south of Graham Land, in latitude 70 south, and on the side of the world reached from the tip of South America. Charcot is a rich French scientist. He went into the ice-locked country with everything that money could buy to help him find the pole. His ship, the Pourquoi Pas ("why not?") a three-masted vessel, is the most perfectly appointed yet for the hunt for the pole He had motor sleds of his own inven-tion to carry his supplies.

There are not intelligent Eskimos in the Antarctic; no hardy dogs like the Eskimos have. There is little land that bleak and desolate. Walrus, narwhal, Polar bear and smaller game like eider duck, ptarmigan and hare, are scarce at the south pole.

In fact, explorers find that Peary's work in the north is like child's play beside some of the difficulties farthest south. As opposed to the leads of water, which baffle north polar travelers, there is the huge majestic ice barrier of the southermost ocean. Sheer and sharp it rises out of the ocean 300 feet high, its walls as smooth and as level as glass. Lieut. Shackleton found that after evading this ice wall by a wide detout his troubles had just begun.
