COMPLIMENT

TO A NEWLY MARRIED PAIR.
I saw two clouds at morning,
Tied with the rising sun;
And in the dawn they floated on,
And mingled into one;
I thought that morning cloud was best,
It mov'd so sweetly to the west.
I saw two summer currents
Flow smoothly to their meeting,
And join their course with silent force,
In peace each other greeting;
Calm was their course thro' banks of green,
While dipping eddies play'd between.
Such be your gentle motion,
Till life's last pulse shall beat;
Like summer's beam and summer's stream,
Float on in joy, to meet
A calmer sea, where storms shall cease—
A purer sky, where all is peace.

Intelligence of Capt. Ross.—We copy the following paragraph from Jameson's Edinburgh New Philosophical Journal:—"Two accounts of the progress of Capt. Ross's exploratory voyage have reached us. We give them as communicated to us. According to the one account, Capt. Ross was met with in Baffin's Bay, in August, 1829, where, having suffered damage during hard weather, he fortunately was enabled, from the wreck of a Greenland ship, to refit. He afterwards steered northward, and has not since been heard of. The other account represents our adventurous commander and his brave crew as having been forced back to Lively Bay, in Baffin's Bay, where they spent last winter."

On Monday, the 10th inst., a young lady who had been dancing at a ball, at Monkwearmouth, Durham, sat down to rest herself, and expired immediately. Her death is attributed to apoplexy from too tight lacing.—Hull Packet.

The Queen rises between eight and nine o'clock—often as early as eight, and never later than nine. The breakfast is of the most simple kind, and occupies but little time. The afternoon is usually spent in listening to applications on various matters connected with the benefit of individuals who present applications for the Queen's patronage, &c. The Queen devotes but little time to her toilet, and never passes a day without taking exercise out of doors, the nature of which depends upon the state of the weather. The remainder of the day, till the dinner hour, is spent in an interchange of kindness with her Majesty's royal relatives, and those persons who are favoured with her particular intimacy. Her Majesty also takes an interest in reading, especially in the German newspapers. The dinner of the royal couple is perfectly simple, and occupies but little time, and the evening is spent in the most strictly domestic manner—the Queen herself, and the ladies who are her companions, invariably occupying themselves with needlework, or some other ornamental work. The royal couple invariably retire to rest at eleven o'clock. Their Majesties leave Brighton on the 20th of next month for St. James's, and on the 24th the Queen will hold the first of eight drawing-rooms, which will be continued at about an interval of a fortnight between each. On the 28th of this month there will be a grand party at the Pavilion. It is said 900 invitations have been issued.—Jan. 25.

The Emperor Nicholas and the ex-King of France.—We have heard, (says the Court Journal), and place confidence in the statement, that his Majesty, the Emperor of all the Russias, has evinced his marked sympathy in the present melancholy condition of the ex-King of France, by granting him an annual pension of five millions of roubles. The object of the Emperor is to relieve the fallen monarch from the necessity of being obliged to depend for the maintenance of his rank on the alms of his late subjects.

Every control over the Court-martial, rendered in fact the sole arbiter of the life and honor of each individual soldier. The nation beheld with indignation the decrees of these courts repeatedly quashed, until at length their decisions attained the degree of severity that was required from them. Many members, in consequence sent in their resignation; many, personally insulted by the commander-in-chief, pushed by their own blood the outrages that had been committed upon them, and, at the same time, showed that it was not the want of true courage, but the fear of compromising the future state of their country, that withheld their arms from falling a vengeance upon their oppressors.

"On the meeting of the first Diet of the kingdom, a proposal of the Emperor, promises that the blessings of a Constitution should be extended to our brethren, who were to be re-united to us, revived extinguished hopes, and caused the moderation to reign in the Chambers which was their only and not object. The freedom of the Press, and the publicity of the proceedings of the Diet, were only tolerated in so far as they gave vent to the hasty and partial views of a subjunctive people in honor of their all-powerful conqueror; but when, after that Diet was closed, the public journals continued to discuss public affairs, a severe censorship was introduced; and on the meeting of the following Diet, which promised to itself the same object as the former, the representatives of the people were persecuted by the opinions they delivered in the Chambers. The Constitutional States of Europe will be astonished when they learn what has been so carefully concealed from them: who, on the one hand, they behold the free and moderate use the Poles have made of their Liberty, the veneration they have shown for their sovereign, his religion and customs uniformly treated with respect, and on the other, the bad faith with which power has been used, not content with despoiling a unhappy people of their rights, but imposing the burthen of these violations to the unbridled exercise of their freedom."

"The placing in union upon one head the Crowns of an Emperor and of a Constitutional King was one of those political monstrosities which are never of long duration. Every man foresaw that the kingdom of Poland must become either the nursery of liberal institutions for Russia, or sink under the iron hand of its despotic monarch. This question was soon resolved. It appeared that, at one moment the Emperor Alexander consented he might consolidate his arbitrary power with a liberal law, and thereby secure for himself a new foundation for the affairs of Europe. But he was soon convinced that liberty could never become so debased as to be the blind instrument of despotism: from that time, instead of his liberating Poland, he became her persecutor. Russia lost all hope of ever seeing the yoke of oppression, and a whole Palatine was deprived of its representation, and the Chambers no longer allowed the faculty of voting the supplies. New burdens were imposed, new monopolies created to dry up the sources of national wealth; and the treasury, enriched by these measures, became the pasture of avaricious speculators, infamous hiringling investigators, and vile and degenerate sycophants. Instead of the economy so repeatedly
