

VARIETIES.

From the London John Bull.

THE TRI-COLOURED FLAG.—How the French can bear again to see it, we are much puzzled to comprehend—they may talk of Austerlitz, and Jena, and half-a-dozen other places where, what they call their glory, was enhanced, while it flowed: but it was beaten, degraded, and crushed day after day, and week after week, by its enemies, and finally hurried into oblivion and contempt from the glorious field of Waterloo.

Had they liberty of the press under that flag? France never had any thing approaching to a constitution till the restoration of the Bourbons.

Had they liberty of the press under that flag? Ask the surviving relatives of PALM, the bookseller, who was shot to death for publishing a libel on the usurper.

When they had any representatives under that flag, had they the power or liberty to act according to their consciences? No. When their representatives became refractory, the usurper drove them out of their chambers at the charge of the bayonet.

What is this flag then?—the symbol of republicanis—of anarchy—of disorder. At Calais the people have hoisted the flag upon the pillar erected to commemorate the return of Louis XVIII; they have torn down the inscription descriptive of that event, and have torn up the plate which marked the spot which his foot first touched. What has this to do with the conduct of Charles X. in listening to the published and recorded opinions and demands of his Ministers? Louis XVIII. gave France the Charter, and never infringed its provisions—Louis XVIII is in his grave. What does this spoliation of the column mean? Obedience to the King;—No. It is an act declaratory of the republican feeling which has been loudly proclaimed in the streets of Paris, and of which the tri-colored flag is the type and symbol.

PROPHCY OF NAPOLEON.—Dr. O'Meara, in his "Voice from St. Helena," says, page 160: "He (Napoleon) conversed upon the probability of a revolution in France. 'Ere twenty years have elapsed, when I am dead and buried,' said he, you will witness another revolution in France. It is impossible that twenty-nine millions of Frenchmen can live contented under the yoke of Sovereigns imposed upon them by foreigners and against whom they have fought and bled for nearly thirty years. Can you blame the French for not being willing to submit to the yoke of such animals as Monarches?"

Among the French prisoners found at Algiers was one named Beraud, who had been twenty-nine years at the Algerine galleys. He was captured at the age of twelve, was supposed to be dead and embraced by his old mother, at Toulon, on his return, as if he had come from the other world.

THE SCOTCH POOR.—It is well known that the poor in Scotland have no legal claim to relief, and the method of providing for them is this:—A collection is made for them every sabbath day at the Kirk; if the necessary demands of the indigent should, as they generally do, exceed the amount thus collected by voluntary contribution, the next step is a meeting of the heritors or landed proprietors of the parish, who, in general, agree to raise a specified sum, and retire on the understanding that each will contribute to it in proportion to his interest in the parish. The fund thus raised is distributed under the superintendence of the minister, acting under the advice, and with the assistance of the Kirk Session.—London Atlas.

REMEDY FOR A COUGH.—The following medicine for a cough has performed such extraordinary cures, in private practice, that the professor is induced to publish it for the benefit of society:—Take six ounces of Italian liquorice, (that stamped Solazzi is by far the best,) cut into small pieces, and put into an earthenware jar, with a quarter of a pint of the best white wine vinegar; simmer together until the liquor is dissolved, then add two ounces of oil of Almonds, and half an ounce of tincture of opium; stir the whole well together, and it is fit for use. Take two spoonfuls when going to bed, and the same quantity whenever the cough is troublesome in the daytime.—American Farmer.

QUILLS.—Quills are things that sometimes are taken from the pinions of one goose to spread the opinions of another.
