The action followed a critical analysis of Peary's narrative of his expedition kansas, "put Peary in the Dr. Cook class." Macon declared that a careful survey of Peary's story showed that it miles travelled per day. He stamped tion. He declared:

"In Peary's travels from Cape Columbia to the point where Capt. Bartlett left him and returned, he covered an average of 9.06 miles per day. That is not as good as the average made by Dr. Cook in the same latitudes. The astonishing feature of Peary's statement, however, is the number of miles he save ne travelled every day after Captain Bartlett left him.

"His greatest marches singularly, were all north of Bartlett's camp. He claims that he made an average of 26 miles per day from Bartlett's camp to the Pole and back. "The greatest increase commenced singularly on the very day he left

Bartlett. "They practically end at identically the same spot on the return journey. "In the last three days he states he 44 nautical miles per day, or over 50 this was done at the end of a fatigu-
