

ARRESTED FOR SLAYING JUSTICE OF PEACE

Two Men Caught at Havre, Mont., by U. S. Police — On Way Back to Canada to be Identified.

Regina, Sask., July 9.—Two men, the alleged murderers of James Chivias of Abisk, Alberta, have been arrested at Havre, Mont., by United States authorities at the instigation of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. Both men are charged with murder. They waived extradition and are now on the way to Abisk for positive identification. In appearance they tally exactly with the description given of the murderers and the police believe that after a painstaking search of several months they at least have secured the right man. Chivias, who was a justice of the peace, was murdered early in the month of May in a public restaurant when he attempted to place two men under arrest.

GOOD ADVICE FOR BUYERS OF BLACK FOXES

Frank Tuplin again points to proper methods of acquiring new Foxes for breeding.

Frank F. Tuplin's advice to the man about to start in the fox business is: "First buy the best animals you can get for the smallest amount of money possible, this is business, but you must not lose sight of the fact that a thousand dollars right here, is nothing to get a proper start, for if a man does not commence anything right he will be seriously handicapped in his future business."

"Second, the ordinary purchaser of black, black and silver foxes as they are sold today in Canada, is entirely at the mercy of the man from whom he buys. He may have an expert knowledge of other kinds of stock, such as horses, cattle, dogs, etc., but know absolutely nothing of the different qualities which go to make up a first class black or silver fox. Nor is it enough to ask the vendor to show his account sales of the skins he has shipped to London, for while the account sales of skins may be pleasing to you, you want to be sure you are getting the same blood as appears in the account sales."

"Third, a man who thinks of entering into a business of which he is comparatively ignorant should first study and weigh all sides of the matter carefully. Let him not be penny wise and pound foolish. For instance, a man wishes to purchase foxes. He goes to the most successful fox breeder he can find and when he is told the price of foxes is $10,000 or $12,000 per pair it staggers him. He cannot find so much money. Still he believes there are immense profits to be had in the business or perhaps he buys anything that will fit his small trade. He may, or may not, know that there is the greatest difference in the quality of fox fur and so long as the foxes look dark with silver he will be ready to pay many times their value. On the other hand, the purchaser may be unwilling to take the advice of anyone save himself. On inquiry he learns that he can import a fox for a modest sum and further find that he can produce a mate from some irresponsible dealer. Then he congratulates himself on being well and cheaply established in the business. He has bought in a hap-hazard way and where he thought he could get the best bargain his chief thought having been to get foxes, set them down in a pen and his fortune would be assured, but in ten chances to one he will not succeed in this way. Sometimes the crafty fox-breeder may keep several grades of foxes in their ranch, may show the anxious and unsuspecting purchaser an account sales obtained for his best stock and deliver to him foxes which are just dark enough to deceive him. Many dealers are handling a very inferior grade of foxes even though they may look black. For instance, there is the brown black, the rusty black, the pale silver, etc., all of which are undesirable. Some ranches are even going into red foxes but the day of cheap foxes to my mind is done before it begins. The large profits obtained from good silvers are tempting many to buy anything so long as it is a fox, this policy will kill itself automatically.

Remember the most important things that go to make up a high priced fox are as follows: He must be heavily furred, whether black or silver it matters little, provided the quality be good. A blue black will not fade and will stand until it is worn out. A brown black will fade more and more, until the owner is ashamed to wear it.

Those who enter the fox business may be, paradoxically, prepared for some surprises—usually very agreeable ones. It may not be the luck of all to be favored with a pleasant surprise to such an extent as were those interested in the Rogers-Parquharson ranch a few days ago, but still everyone will rejoice with them over the good luck which sprang itself upon them so unannouncedly. Up to the period mentioned, the parties owning this ranch had not shared in the good fortune which has come to so many ranches this year. By appearance

IGNORANCE IS CAUSE OF LOSS TO FOX OWNERS

Ranchers should first learn the requirements of the Foxes before buying—experience, necessary.

A man bought a pair of foxes that was told very little about the business. He knew enough, however, to remove the male, and, after doing so, continued to feed the female daily. He went to the ranch one morning and she did not come out of her house as usual to get her food. He had not been told to expect this, but thought to himself, she may have escaped, so he began to look around to see if this was the case. Finding no holes made, he thought he would look in her house to see if she was in there. In a very nervous state of mind he opened the door and "low and behold" there she was, with her four little kittens nestled close to her bosom and her big tail curled outside of them to keep them snug and warm. He imagined, of course, that he had done wrong, and carefully closing the door of her house, stalked away and ran home as fast as he could, saying to himself at every step, "No more poor days for me for my fortune is made." But he never saw the little foxes again. What happened? She carried them out and buried them. This is the old old story so often told by inexperienced attendants. What will a bird do if you put your hand in her nest? Leave it of course. A fox is fifty per cent. more foxy than any bird. When the man disturbed her she removed the pups one by one and hid them in the cold ground or snow, any place was better than the place discovered. So they died and the man had learned that which he should have paid a few extra dollars for when he got his foxes, and he had lost many thousands.

Every man who invests his money in foxes should get with them the knowledge, experience and education of a successful breeder and the man who sets down a pair of foxes and expects to make his fortune without this is very foolish indeed, and will likely lose his money.

A SURPRISE

Those who enter the fox business may be, paradoxically, prepared for some surprises—usually very agreeable ones. It may not be the luck of all to be favored with a pleasant surprise to such an extent as were those interested in the Rogers-Parquharson ranch a few days ago, but still everyone will rejoice with them over the good luck which sprang itself upon them so unannouncedly. Up to the period mentioned, the parties owning this ranch had not shared in the good fortune which has come to so many ranches this year. By appearance their foxes had not had a productive season—not the sign of a single pup being visible. But a few days ago when the rancher entered one of the dens, to his utter surprise of profound delight, he came upon five of the little black beauties snugly content and enclosed in the recesses of the pen. It was like the discovery of a little gold mine to that rancher.

Among the fur farming companies which have just been granted letters patent for their incorporation is the "Summerside Mink Co. Ltd.," the capital stock of which amounts to $10,000, divided into shares of the value of $10 each.
