A car loaded with cattle "jumped" the track on the bridge which crosses the river just above Rochester Falls, and plunged with its living freight into the rapids. The railroad authorities held an auction on the spot, and disposed of the lot, 17 in all, for $250. The purchasers then, by means of ropes, brought the cattle, one after another, into the swift current, when they were hurled over the falls. General Butler dropped into eloquence the other day. Hear him. He thought ngress 'had better 'pawl'—that is, pu down the catch and hold what they had got, and then spit on their hands and take another heave." We are in doubt as to whether this is poetry or eloquence; but, as it comes from a Massachuseits statesman, it must be the latter.

at the "groceries" are a good deal more than "the harmless depositories of codfish and wash-brushes." That the "sable and alluring bottle nestles beneath the counters, and if a customer, after purchasing a bunch of shoe-strings or a fish-hook, feels as though an encourager, with or without sugar, would make a new man of him, he can get it at any of those modest marts of trade."

The Troy Press chronicles a case of cool and daring heroism, and the rescue fright, across a railroad track, on seeing a locomotive rushing toward her, in the following words: "Keys jumped off his engine, caught the prostrate woman in his arms, and stepped back from the track in the very second that the train whistled by. He placed the woman in the station, and jumped aboard his own train, which had been stopped by the fireman for him, and started off when all was well."

We paused this morning, says the Peoria Review, to watch a lonely hearse pass along the streets. Over it nodded from curious eyes the casket of the friend-less dead, and bullion fringe and silver lace-work could not detract from the streets. Over it nodded to remain him, and started off when all we work of death. No carriages followed the hearse to man's resting-place; no stifled sobs burst from the lips of of a woman who was prostrated, by t Greenville, N. H., by the discovery in at Greenville, N. The bag also contained a nurse bottle with a small quantity of milk in it; also a shawl. The head of the child was black and the hands tightly clenched, indicating that it may have been strangled to death. Suspicion rests upon no one in the village as being the I guilty party. It is thought the bag was checked at and sent from some other depot to Greenville.

Mr. John Wanamaker, the sanguine young gentleman, who has charge of the heavy business of working up Philadelphia's enthusiasm anent the Centennial Exhibition, figures up $5.000,000 with all the facility of a Wilkins Micawber, thusly: "Received originally from citizens, $1,000,000; from City Councils, $500,000; from steam railroads (estimated) $500,000; from the State, $1,000,000; received since the meeting in Independence Square, $150,000: "This," says Mr. Wanamaker, "with $1,000,000 looked for from City Councils, leaves but $850,000 to be raised." Just as easy as rolling off a log; you see! Only the whole sum is "subscriptions," "estimates," "looked for," "to be raised," we notice, and very hard cash appears to be nowhere.

Dr. Ferris, who is charged with the violation of some rules or tenets of Methodisism in the publication of a philosophical pamphlet. Nothing has been decided yet. During the proceedings a man disturbed the conference when they all sang "All hail the power of Jesus' name." The clergymen took him by the shoulder and bodily ousted him out of the house. A recent volume on the Franco German war, published in Bavaria, closes with the statement: "In a short time, sooner, perhaps, than we expect, war will be renewed, and we shall be called upon to make fresh sacrifices, that the blood poured out at Worth and Sedan may not have been shed in vain."

As soon as the ceremony of inaugura ting King Kalakua was concluded we are told that "the audience gave three cheers for their sovereign, which the crowd in the streets took up and repeated, while the guns on Punchbowl Battery boomed forth the first royal salute to King Kalakua and his royal standard." The Punchbowl always comes in for a hearing some how or other.

No carriages followed the hearse to man's resting-place; no stifled sobs burst from the lips of stricken mourners; no eyes turned pityingly upon the scanty funeral; the great heart of the city throbbed unceasingly on, and the roar and clamor of traffic hushed the hollow rumble of the catafaluge. Buried alone—ah, when might it come upon us, thus to pass from the Present into the eternal Future, to commit ourselves alone to the bosom of the river whose waters leave the hither shore in the dark, chill bitterness of death, and thitherward are forever veiled in clouds of the Mystic which human eye hath never pierced. This a dreary fate to ponder o'er. This friendless man should have at least one mourner, so with bated breath and uncovered head we whispered to the driver, "who is, or was, the lonely dead?" and the driver said, "dead nothin'; I've just taken' the old bone trap over to the shop to get her springs fixed. She bounced the last stiff we took out in her clean out o' the coffin. Who a Bill I blast ye, or I'll cut your hair with a black-snake!" We ceased weeping.
