Lilies Among Perfect Flowers

By Agriculture Department
O.H.C.
There is no other flower that ranks so high as the lily for general effect in the garden landscape. One clump of tall lilies against a suitable background of shrubbery or evergreens will prove to be the focal point of attention, no matter how lavishly other flowers have been used. Their attraction is largely due to their simplicity, and that in itself is a sermon in a nutshell, or rather in a bud, on the whole art of garden design. Notwithstanding this fact, lilies have not been generally used for beautiful effects in landscape work. Too often they are planted inna bed by themselves, in an assortment of different kinds, evidently designed as a beginner's collection. The stately flowers which should stand like queens among their pretty, but less imposing sisters, herded together in a bunch by themselves. As though there had been a social revolution in the flower bed and all the innocent but offensive princesses had been bundled together, there to await the decision of the council of work-a-day flowers as to what their fate should be.

Certainly this is not because other uses for the lily are wanting. They are as good for as wide a variety of uses as almost any flower that grows. Take for instance their advantages as a flower for autumn. Some of the finest are perfect, hardy, and will continue to bloom from the first planting. Many of them grow naturally in the open woods, or in meadows where they are shaded a good part of the day. Grouped in naturalistic effect in the border or among top- growing shrubs, they find quite an ideal occasion, since the soil about the roots is kept shaded and cool, and is mulched naturally in the fall with leaves and decaying humus, while the tall flower stalks push up easily through the shrubbery branches into the full light.

The foliage of the shrubs sets off the beautiful blooms to perfection. In the more elaborate garden, where a larger collection of the hardy lilies is desired, they may be grouped in beds in a section of the garden where they can be given the special soil and drainage which some of the less hardy varieties require. If possible, the beds should be placed where the blooms will have a suitable background, a building, fence, or tall shrubs, for in most varieties they are so tall and imposing, they look about as much as a couple of grown-ups at a children's tea-party.
A much more effective way of utilizing our lilies where the soil condition will permit, is to plant them in small, isolated groups in carefully selected positions in the garden, against buildings or against a shrubbery planting. If the gardener has artistic taste enough to make happy selections in choosing the spots where these highlights are to go in the general garden picture, they will make a very beautiful effect. By a careful selection of varieties, flowers may be had from late June until frost. Since they range from 18-inch to 8-inch in height, the gardener has a diversity of material ready to his hand.

A very simple guide to the best arrangement of the varieties is found in a number of light stakes, cut to various lengths, and marked with the season of bloom of the lilies of correspondence height.
These may be easily tried in various positions, and will be tremendous help in assistance one to visualize accurately the exact effects. When one stops to think that these plantings may remain for years, it seems only common sense to go to some trouble in getting them just right in the first place.

NO MEETING PLACE.
Will the taxpayers and other citizens of Kitchener and Waterloo keep in mind that the worthy young men of any community are its greatest Capital. Will they also be mindful of the fact that the majority of our most promising young citizens are returned men, they not admit that man is naturally a sociable animal and that too much care cannot be taken as to the manner and form of the associations of young men.
Will they also be mindful of the fact that we have no local Y.M.C.A. or other institution where these young men can indulge in clean, healthy recreations.
The proposed permanent quarters for our returned soldiers will be a place where our boys can go without fear of contamination—Club Rooms where the social atmosphere will be pure and uplifting.
Surely no worthy citizen can turn a deaf ear to this last patriotic appeal.
The Trustee Board of worthy citizens guarantee the honest handling of the money while a capable Executive will see that none but gentlemen frequent the Club Rooms and that nothing but clean and worthy pleasures and recreations are provided.
Don't be weary in well doing or in clean giving but open your heart and your purse to further this most worthy movement—the last lap in a little gift for the boys themselves.

The giraffe, which is a very timid animal, is approached with the utmost difficulty, on account of its eyes being so placed that it can see as well behind as in front.
Ambergris, which forms a basis for nearly all the best quality perfumes, is very valuable, the largest piece on record, weighing one hundred and thirty pounds, being sold for $2600.
The most powerful lamp in the world is in the De la Heve lighthouse near Havre. With flashes one-tenth of a second in duration, it actually gives as much light as two and a half million candles.
So prolific is the common or domestic fly that in a single season one industrious female could count her progeny to twenty millions, if all survived and followed her example of maternity.
When the Japanese desires to woo the fickle goddess of sleep, he stretches himself on a rush mat on the floor, puts a hard, square block of wood under his head, and does not sleep if he does not have it.
If a man possessed the industry and architectural skill of the African ant, he could build for himself, without any assistance, a house so lofty that the Woolworth Building would serve as a doorstep to it.
The total number of people that the world can maintain is estimated at six billions, or about four times the present population. At the present rate of increase, this figure will be reached in some two hundred years.
In the continental countries of Europe the profession of hotel waiter is held as a highly dignified calling, and the continental governments run special schools of training for this profession, which is regarded as a stepping-stone to hotel management.
Praying by electricity is now practised by the Buddhists in India. The prayers, written on long bands of paper, are wrapped round a wheel, and each turn of the wheel is equivalent to one repetition of the prayer. The pious native believes that the greater number of revolutions of his prayer-wheel the better his prayers will be answered, and he either turns it by hand or lets the wind or water turn it. To overcome the difficulty when the water-courses run dry and to safeguard the religious customs and traditions of the natives, the Government now compels the electric companies to equip the prayer-wheels with motors and supply the necessary current to turn them during the dry season free of all charge to the natives.
"Are you one of the striking miners?" asked the woman at the door.
"Yes, mum," he replied. "I'm what they call a pioneer. I struck thirty years ago, and I've never give in yet."

Professor (to his class): "Gentlemen, I have to apologize for a short delay in beginning this lecture. I have unfortunately left my manuscript at home, and my son—whom I have sent for it—will be here shortly."
Professor's son (returning): "Mother could not find the manuscript and so she has sent the book you copied it from."
Mrs. Taylor: "What are you burning my den?"
Mr. Taylor: "The letters I wrote you before we were married."
Mrs. Taylor: "Oh, you heartless wretch. Have you no sentiment, no tender—"
Mr. Taylor: "Shut up my dear I'm doing it for your sake. I'm trying to manage things so that when I die nobody will dispute my will on the ground of insanity."

"Your narrative is too highly colored," remarked the editor, returning the bulky manuscript. "In what way?" inquired the disappointed author. "Why," replied the editor, "in the very first chapter you make the old man turn purple with rage the while a turn green with envy, the hero turn red with blushes, and the coachman turn pale with cold."
Queer.

Teach the Children to Save
Habits are acquired early in life. Children who are taught the value of money and how to save it, grow up into good business men and capable women.
The easiest way to teach children to save, is to start a Savings Account for each child ($1.00 each is sufficient). After a child has saved another dollar, make an additional deposit, he or she will have a better appreciation of just what a dollar stands for, and how much work and self-denial it represents.
