

remember him as a kind and indulgent grandfather and an interesting story teller. He died in 1906 at the age of 82 without ever having been ill so long as any one could remember, and is still missed by all who survive him.

