The Prayer of the Beaten Men.

Low is the fallen, who with hapless faces Lies in the dust, in suffering robes, In the hour of death, and heard the rattling tread Of the foot of the victor, and the We are the fallen, who, by the shafts of Awaiting death, heard the for shouts begin, And with our last glance glimpsed the victor's glory.

For which we died, but dying might not win, We were but men. Always our eyes were bold,
We could not read the dark that waited us around,
Nor dim our faith paths with these shadows—We fought not knowing God was on the ground.

One day we stood in the misty street of a town, we were waiting for the Make our old words to speak to us with Fowers we were watched, and by the state of the town.

"A great oak tree in the forest Of men—old voices of our lost home land, Or rise, the gateway of this dim world rising, Give us our words again, and with our hands."
—William Harvey Woods.

IN THE FOG.

BY RICHARD HARDING DAVIS.
Continued.

"It would prevent him speaking in the House to-night. The Navy Increase Bill," he added gloomily. "It is a Government measure, and Sir Andrew speaks for it. And so great is his influence and so large his influence that if he does—the gentleman laughed ruefully—"if he does, it will go through. Now, had I the applaud of my ancestors," he exclaimed, "I would bring chloroform from the nearest chemist, and hang him in that chair. I would tumble his uncomfortable form into a hassock bag, and hold him prisoner until daylight. If I did, I would save the British taxpayer the cost of five more battleships, many millions of pounds."

The gentleman again turned, and surveyed the baronet with freshened interest. The honorary member of the Grill, whose accent already had betrayed him as an American, laughed softly.

"To look at him now," he said, one would not guess he was deeply concerned with the affairs of state." The others nodded silently.

"He has not lifted his eyes from that young since we first entered," added the bookish member. "He eyed you, meant to speak to-night."
"Oh, yes, he will speak," muttered the one with the black pearl smoothly.
"During these last hours of the session the House sits late, but when the Navy bill comes up on its third reading he will be in his place—and he will pass it."

The fourth member, a stout and florid gentleman of a somewhat sporty appearance, in a short smoking jacket and black tie, sighed enviously.

"Fancy one of us being as cool as that, if he knew he had to stand up with an hour and rattle off a speech in Parliament. And yet he is as keen over that book he's reading as though he had nothing before him until tonight."

"Yes, see how eager he is," whispered the youngest member. "He does not lift his eyes even now when he cuts the pages. It is probably an Admiralty Report, or some other weighty work of statistics which bears up on his speech."

The gentleman with the black pearl laughed wrothfully.

"The weighty work in which the eminent statesman is so deeply engrossed," he said, "is called 'The Great Rand Robbery.' It is a detective novel, for sale at all bookstalls."

"The American raised his eyebrows in disbelief.

"The Great Rand Robbery?" he repeated incredulously. "What an odd taste!"

"It is not a taste, it is his vice," returned the gentleman with the pearl stud. "It is his one dispassion. He is poted for it. You, as a stranger, could hardly be expected to know of this idiosyncrasy. Mr. Gladstone sought relaxation in the Greek posts.
Sir Andrew finds his in Babylonian Since I have been a member of Parliament I have never seen him in the country."

"The American moved his head in assent and glanced at the two other members. They were looking doubt-fully at him, and the face of each showed that he was greatly perplexed.

"Sir Andrew advanced to within the light of the candles and drew a chair toward him.

"The crime must be exceptional indeed," he said, "to justify the police in interfering with a representative of a friendly power. If I were not forced to leave at once, I should take the liberty of asking you to tell us the details."

The Parting Shot.

EDITOR ACADIAN.—Mr. Chipman, in counting the words of the "Commission" in Matthew, takes all the recorded words of Jesus, while in Mark, in order to make his point, he leaves out the 17th and 18th verses. I am glad to see the orthodox hawk at including such ridiculous verses in the utterance of Jesus. His last words in Mark contain eighty words, but in Matthew they are abridged as I claimed to sixty words. If Jesus really spoke these words, why did the apostles expect the end of the world so soon and make little or no attempt to carry out his last commands? Why did the apostles quarrel with Paul about his mission to the Gentiles and compromise by saying that they would preach to the Jews and let Paul preach to the Gentiles on condition that he take up collection among the heathen for the poor Christians at Jerusalem?

Technically, "manuscript" refers to the copies in the original language and "version" refers to translations. My misunderstanding arose by crediting my orthodox friend with the jewel of consistency. It never occurred to me that such a man would admit that the originals were corrupt and then try to prove how they ought to be by going to the translations of those same corrupt originals. That circular chain of logic is far removed from "the straight and narrow way."

I think most people understand that the results of modern scholarship tend to destroy, root and branch, the traditional view of the Bible. I do not include scholars by courtesy, of 1910 or fourth rank who may occasionally be found attempting to work over the results of original research to bolster a dying cause. Prof. Sayce is, I believe, the only modern scholar of first rank who is acceptable to the anticritical party, and I shall use him later against Mr. Chipman's views on several points. The attempt to bring in the opinions of "thousands upon thousands" under the head of modern scholarship indicates the breadth he gives to the term.

It is quite a comfort to be classed as a skeptic with respected Baptist clergyman and with those who write text books for Baptist educational institutes. Mr. Chipman speaks very gingivally of Acadian, but if he will read President Cutler's "Psychological Phenomena of Christianity," he would without hesitation conclude that he had no "benign literary matter" at all. If I had the time and Mr. C. would consent to respond we might rebuttal Christianity, and even the Baptists down to "one and my wife, my son John and John's wife."

In his first letter my friend attempted to show that ancient dates, except the Hebrew, should be divided by twelve, because time was then reckoned by lunar months. He now wastes much space to prove this larger fact which no one disputes. We are not worrying over such matters, for scholars are competent to make the necessary calculations, and when they say that certain inscriptions are 6000 years old, we do not insult them by asking if they are sure it is not 6000 months. Prof. Sayce himself says the first Egyptian king mentioned on the monuments reigned 7000 years ago, and Prof. Breasted, quoted by Waring, says the calendar year of 355 days was introduced into Egypt in 4241 B. C., or 237 years before the creation.

Your correspondent says of the first verse of Genesis, "How immeasurably such divinely inspired history rises above national legends." And Prof. Sayce, his favorite authority, says, "The narrative of the creation is a purified copy of a Babylonian epic." He also agrees with more advanced critics in demolishing the book of Daniel, and largely accepts the critical analysis of the New Testament.

I have not quoted many authorities in my previous letters, save from a lack of them, for I have a hundred or two as good or better than Mr. Chip-man's.

Mr. John Johnson, Gwely, Alta., writes: "Five years ago I was cured of blind itching piles of twenty-seven years' standing by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. I had to think that death would be the only relief I could ever get from the terrible misery of piles."
"Dr. Chase's Ointment" is worth fifty dollars a box instead of sixty cents a different man since using it. I am feeling all the time and never miss a day. Words fail to express my gratitude for the cure this Ointment made for me. I cannot tell how much about it as it deserves. Any one wishing this cure write direct to me.

Do not accept an imitation or substitute of Dr. Chase's Ointment, for there has not yet been discovered a treatment which so promptly gives relief from hemorrhoids and so thoroughly cures every form of piles. It costs a box, at all dealers or Edmundson, Boston, scholars, and I only attempt to believe.

man's. Quoting authorities unknown to the reader is so much waste effort.
I have used Waring because many here know and respect him, and I use Bruce because he has the recognition of that scholarly gentleman, the late Dr. Sawyer, and also of Acadia College and hence the Maritime Baptists.
And I may add that I can support most of the positions I have taken from these two authors. Of course they may be "hazy" as claimed, for they rub the fur down while I rub it up. They write for people who want more truth than they feel is safe, while I hope I am writing for some who want all the truth they can get.

Mr. Smith's Bible dictionary was rank hersay fifty years ago but quite orthodox today. The "Psychological Basis of Christianity," a young man well known in the town of St. Jerome, Que., is one of the host who bear testimony to the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. He says: "When I left school I became a book-keeper in an important office. Probably due to confinement I began to suffer from indigestion and loss of strength. I became pale and weak, my appetite failed and was often seized with palpitations of the heart and violent headaches. I tried several remedies, but they did not do me a bit of good. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and did so, and the use of eight boxes brought me back to perfect health and strength. I have since enjoyed the best of health and cannot say too much in praise of this valuable medicine."
