"August Flower"

I had been troubled five months with Dyspepsia. The doctors told me it was chronic. I had a fullness after eating and a heavy load in the pit of my stomach. I suffered frequently from a Water Brash of clear matter. Sometimes a deathly Sickness at the Stomach would overtake me. Then again I would have the terrible pains of Wind Colic. At such times I would try to belch and could not. I was working then for Thomas McHenry, Druggist, Cor. Irwin and Western Ave., Allegheny City, Pa., in whose employ I had been for seven years. Finally I used August Flower, and after using just one bottle for two weeks, was entirely relieved of all the trouble. I can now eat things I dared not touch before. I would like to refer you to Mr. McHenry, for whom I worked, who knows all about my condition, and from whom I bought the medicine. I live with my wife and family at 39 James St., Allegheny City, Pa. GENERAL NEWS.

—Queen Victoria's household numbers 1,000 persons.

—The average amount of each life insurance policy in the United Kingdom is £400.

—New Haven, Conn, comes to the front in unenviable notoriety by the persecution of a women dentist by the men of her profession.

—There died at Dog Lake reservation, near Lake Manitoba, on Feb. 2nd., the largest women in the world. She was a squaw. She weighed 700 pounds and measured thirty-four inches around the arm. It took a coffin seven feet long and five feet broad to hold the remains.

—Of the 328,716 divorces granted in the United States for twenty years, 216, 176, or 65.8 per cent of the whole, were granted to wives on their petitions for divorce from their husbands, and 112, 546 were granted husbands for the alleged fault of the wives, being 31.2 per cent of the whole number; that is to say, in the proportion of nearly two to one it is the wife who seeks a divorce rather than the husband.

—An ingenious trick was recently perpetrated in London. A "gentleman" rang the bell at a flat one afternoon at three o'clock, and enquired whether Mr. Grey was at home. "No, sir" said the porter, "he rarely, if ever, comes back before five o'clock." "That is strange," returned the other, "since I know he has an appointment here with a Mr. Johnson at four o'clock," and went his way. At four o'clock to the minute Mr. Johnson called, and, giving his name, was allowed to wait in Mr. Grey's apartments, which he denuded of everything of "portable value" in ten minutes, and then walked out, observing, as he passed the porter, that he could wait no longer.

—A great sensation has been created at Chatham, Ont., by the conduct of Rev. N. H. Martin, for fifteen years pastor of the leading Episcopal church there. Some weeks ago his engagement to Miss Kitche, a prominent member of his congregation, was announced. The wedding was set for Tuesday night, but the rev. gentleman failed to put in an appearance. Investigation revealed the fact that he had left town on Saturday last and had not since been heard from. When this fact became known Miss Delmage, another highly respected lady, came forward and said that Martin had promised to marry her Monday night and that all preparations had been made for a secret marriage, as Martin did not want it known.

INDIAN HOREMANSHIP

A correspondent of the Omaha Herald having visited an Arapahoe camp gives the following account of an Indian drill, ordered for his amusement.

Fifty fine looking young men, mounted upon ponies, drew up before the tents At a signal from the chief, they began their evolutions with a loud yell.

In a moment they disappeared over a neighboring hill. Then there suddenly rose a mighty trampling of horses' feet and they swept past again, so compact that I only saw a ball made of horses and men.

Splitting in two, one body swept to the right and another to the left, and again, they disappeared. Presently they charged each other in solid lines, and while the spectator waited breathlessly for the shock of collision, the files skilfully opened to the right and left, and the lines passed through the intervals without touching.

Now came the moment for displaying individual horsemanship. Some of the riders approached, each lying so close to his pony's back that nothing but the horse could be seen. Others stood erect upon their animals' backs. Some hung to the horse by the foot and one hand, so that the bodies were completely protected by those of the ponies.

These young warriors threw objects upon the ground, and picked them up at full gallop, and drew bow and shot arrows from beneath the horses' neck. Some of the men exchanged horses while riding.

Again, a man would fall from his horse as if wounded, and two others, riding up beside him, would take him by an arm and a leg, swing him between their horses, and carry him off. This exhibition lasted nearly two hours.

There are 46,000 oil wells in the United States, and their daily output is 130,000 barrels.

Bound to Have It

I MUST and I will have it exclaimed the little man and he dashed the paper to the floor, jumped from his chair and brought his clinched hand down on the sable vigorously; then, moping his brow and adjusting his glasses, he seated himself, seized his pen and in a nervous, excitable hand wrote: D. M. Ferry & Co. Seedsmen, Windsor, Ont., Gentlemen: Referring to your advertisement in the National Intelligencer, I notice that you say that your Seed Annual for 1892 is free to all applicants. As I buy considerable quantities of vegetable and flower seeds each spring, I would esteem it a favor if you would mail me your Catalogue. My neighbors say it is the best

Very truly yours, RICHARD DOE.

An obedience to the simple laws of hygiene and the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, will enable the most delicate man or woman to pass in ease and safety from the icy atmosphere of February to the warm, moist days of April. It is the best of spring medicines.

How the Office Boy Saved the Editor.

The paper had said something he did not like and he was going to see the editor about it and thump the stuffing out of him, so he said. At the foot of the stairs leading to the den he found a small boy, who blocked his way.

Is the editor in? he enquired roughly.

Yes sir, replied the boy politely.

Can I see him?

I s'pose so, sir.

Well, I want to. Do I go up this way?

Air you Mr. Johnson? inquired the boy with evident personal interest.

Yes, I am.

The same that the paper gave it to in the neck?

Yes. What's that to you?

Nothing much Mr. Johnson, but 'Im your friend.

No, you don't say? said the visitor sarcastically surveying him. Well, let me go on up stairs, won't you?

Cert, Mr. Johnson, but before you go into the editor's room you look in the corner by the door and get a dray pin settin there. I put it where you could get it easy. You see the editor is lookin for you and he's got a big hoss pistol in his drawer and a hatchet lying on his desk, and when I seen them preparations I jest thought it was a shame for the editor to go for a man in his old paper and use a hatchet on him besides without giving him some sort of a show. I ain't nobody but an office boy, but I know what justice is as well as if I was Gov'nor of Canada. Go right up, but go easy. The dray pin is in the left hand corner.

But the man didn't go up.

THE LATEST THICK.

Two men went into a restaurant on Dearborn street, the other evening, says the Chicago Tribune. One was a tall, pock-marked pilgrim who wore a heavy ulster. The other was a short, heavy set man with a gold-headed cane and an eyeglass. They took seats at different tables.

The tall man called for a cup of coffee and a doughnut. He ate slowly, and not at all like a hungry person.

The other man put his cane carefully through the back of the chair behind him inspected the bill of fare, and ordered antelope steaks, frogs legs and champagne.

Before he was half done, the other man finished his doughnut and coffee, sauntered slowly past him, paid his bill at the cashier's desk and went out.

The fat little man ate his luxurious dinner as if he had enjoyed it and lingered long and lovingly over his champagne.

But at last he finished, picked up his check, gathered up his hat and overcoat and looked for his cane.

It was gone.

Then he strode to the cashier's desk full of wrath and asked for the proprietor.

That functionary was summoned, and he opened out upon him:

"Do you protect your guests, sir, from spoilation and robbery?"

"What have you been robbed of?" inquired the proprietor.

"Of a gold-headed cane, sir,— a fine gold-headed cane!" exclaimed the fat little man.

I am sorry such a thing has happened in my establishment," rejoined the proprietor, "but we are not responsible for the loss of anything of that kind. You can see the notification to that effect by looking at one of the framed signs on the walls."

"Yes, sir I see them, and the notification is that you are not responsible for hats, overcoats or umbrellas,' sir! Ididn't loose my hat, overcoat or umbrella, sir! I lost a gold-headed cane that cost the friends who presented it to me a $10 bill! I demand payment for that cane sir! Your head waiter saw me come in with it, sir! It's gone!

The raised voice and excited gestures of the indignant guest had begun to attract attention, and the owner of the restaurant tried to quiet him, but without effect.

No, sir! he shouted. "I don't go out here without redress, or I'll spend a thousand dollors in suing this establishment, and I'll carry the case to the highest court in the land!"

"Don't make any further fuss, my friend," said the proprietor much worried. "What's the amount of your check?"

"It's a beggarly dollar."

"Then let's talk business. How will you compromise? I don't think we ought to suffer for your negligence in loosing that cane, but I'll meet you half way. Will you give me that check, take a dollar and call it square?"

"Sir I will. It has cost me $5 to patronize your place, but you have acted like a gentleman, all things considered. Good evening!"

He surrendered his check, picked up the two half dollars the cashier pushed toward him and went out of the restaurant with the heavy dignity of the man who knew his rights, and, knowing, had dared to maintain them.

As he passed a corner a block and a half away, he was joined by a tall, pock-marked pilgrim in a long ulster, who handed him a long, slender thing that looked like a gold-headed cane, closed his hand over something in return that had a metallic clink, and the two went on down the street in solemn silence.

WOMEN'S OLUMN.

Conducted by the Ladies of the Sackville W. C. T. U.

People You Should Know.

John G. Woolley.

John G. Woolley was born in Ohio in 1850. When eight years of age his parents moved to Illinois, where his boyhood was passed. His first intemperance was in study, and at fifteen his most marked accomplishment was a pale face and a pair of round shoulders. His only and beloved sister, six years his senior, was marked by consumption for an early grave; and the anxiety of parents flowed to their only son, and he was given whiskey and cod-liver oil without stint. As he says, "It was an act of unfathomable kindness, but fraught with unutterable woe."

After his sister's death a trip to California to drink native wines and ride horseback was proposed and carried out, then a trip to Europe. A brilliant college course in the Ohio Wesleyan University followed, and upon his graduation he was elected tutor of belles lettres. He declined this position in order to enter his chosen profession. His admittance to the bar followed in '73. In '78, Minneapolis became his well loved home. "I know when I took the first drop of whiskey as a medicine. I know, too, when I took my first drink as a mere beverage; but I don't know when I CEASED to be my own master, and had the collar of the saloon riveted on my neck." So insidious is this demon, drink!

A prominent Judge of Minneapolis says of him, "From the time of Mr. Woolley's advent among us, it speedily came to be considered that there was no abler, more brilliant or promising candidate for honor or success in his chosen profession than he." In 1887 he left Minneapolis a lost man! A good estate, business, honor, even friends,—all gone! But four years ago in New York City with its ten thousand saloons "the sun of righteousness" rose for him, and since then he has been faithful to the promise he made his dying mother that he would give five good years to helping to better lives men who had fallen under the power of drink. On Saturday, Jan. 31, in Minneapolis, the fourth anniversary of his conversion was celebrated by an immense mass meeting, at which Lady Henry Somerset and Frances Willard spoke. Lady Henry telegraphs, "It was a wonderful meeting." Five thousand people were present. These two gracious servants of our Master have given their time and talents to help along the work to which Mr. Woolley has devoted his life; for he gives not only the five years, but has consecrated his life to the work of saving men, and his rest Island Mission is to be a haven where many a sin tossed soul shall find rest.

A letter of his best explains this work—

By the grace of God, in the hands of good men and women, I am to have a home. It is to be devoted first and last to helping men, who, fallen by drink or hunted by appetite, desire, and seem to deserve, "another chance."

Buildings are to be prepared speedily, and there will be a light in the window and an open door for any such man, who will undertake faithfully to try for a clean life in the name of Jesus Christ. Rest Island is not to be a "resort," nor an "institution," but a sanctuary. There are no "lots for sale," nor any private ends to gain, nor any interest to promote, save only His who offers rest to every weary, heavy-laden man with faith enough to come apart with him and rest awhile. JOHN G. WOOLLEY.

Rest Island, June 1, 1891.

Some one said to him, "You are killing yourself by over-work." The in siant reply was, "I worked much harder for the devil, and it did not kill me." Of him Miss Willard says:—

My friend and brother, John G. Woolley, is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University, also a graduate in law, and was a leading member of the bar in the city of Minneapolis, Minn., for many He is a man of the best antecedents, as any one would know to see him. He has fineness of grain, great sympathy of nature, a remarkably astute and many-sided mind, and a heart and soul renovated and made new by conversion to God. This mighty change has given him back to himself, his family and his friends, from the slavery of drink; and he is to-day, in my opinio n, at the head of all the reformed men whom I have heard. He talks to an audience as a lawyer talks to a jury, in the most telling, logical, perauasive, and winsome manner. He angers nobody, and is a convincer almost unrivalled. One feels that he is a brother, indeed, to every person to whom he speaks.

Mr. Woolley is an enthusiastic friend of the Endeavor movement, and delivered at the Minneapolis Convention a temperance address whose magnificent power will preserve it forever in the memories of all who heard it.

Don't Monkey With The Snake.

It is stated that a rattle-snake cannot bite if held up by the tail. Would you like to put the statement to a practical test? Probably not; but how often do you take far greater risks? A snake-bite is not the only means of introducing poison into the system. If your liver is sluggish, it fails to remove the impurities from the blood which passes through it, and deadly circulation are thus thrown into the circulation, all the more dangerous because they are insidious. If your blood is impure, if your liver is out of order, if you have blotches, pimples, boils or eruptions, "don't monkey with the snake!" Take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the only specific against all blood-poisons, no matter of what name or nature. Salt As a Fertilizer.

(Joseph Harris, in American Agriculturist.)

While nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash are unquestionably the three ingredients of plant food most generally deficient in our soils, it is very certain that they are not the only substances that will increase the growth of our crops. Lime renders the nitrogen and potash of our soils more available; plaster makes clover and corn grow more luxuriantly, and I have seen a decided benefit from an application of salt on mangel-wurzel, barley and wheat.

John Johnson, 'the father of under draining,' and one of the most successful farmers of his time, used salt on his winter wheat for many years. He sowed about four bushels per acre broadcast on the land at the time of sowing the wheat in the fall. He once showed me a large field of wheat that was also sown with salt as above, excepting a narrow strip running across the field. The effect was most markedand beneficial. The wheat on either side this unsalted strip was taller, the straw brighter and stiffer, and the heads better filled. 'Why did the salt do so much good?' Frankly, I do not know. There are hundreds of instances where salt has had a decided effect; there are more instances where its application has done no good. All that we know at present is that salt is very beneficial on some soils and for some crops. One of my neighbors who grows cabbage, onions, carrots, etc., on low, mucky, land depends almost entirely on salt as a fertilizer. He frequently raises a fine crop of late cabbage with salt alone. On similar land of my own in the same swamp I find superphosphate and a little nitre of soda highly beneficial. So that it would seem probably that salt developes plant food from the soil. And it is a question for consideration whether it is cheaper to furnish the phosphoric acid and nitrates in the form of manures or fertilizers or whether we should use salt, lime or plaster to develop them from the soil. If a given amount of money in superphosphate and nitrate of soda will produce as large crops as the same amount of money expended in salt, lime and plaster, then, of course, the fertilizers are to be preferred because they furnish the plant food rather than develop it from the store of organic matter in the soil.

An English paper recently had an article on Jehu humor. The writer says that on one occasion he heard the driver of the prison van known as black Maria distinguish himself. A would-be wit, on the causeway, hailed him, "Got any room in the inside, Robert?" "There's room for one," answered the driver, "we kept it for you." Not entirely disconcerted, the wit made another shot. "What's your fare?" he asked. The answer entirely extinguished him: "Bread and water, same as you had before!"
