SENATOR WARKAT 101

Anniversary on Sabbath
Last Which was Spent

AT HIS HOME

World's Oldest Legislator
Enjoying Comparatively
Good Health

A representative of the Gleaner this morning had the pleasure of a call upon the venerable Senator Wark at his home. The Senator arises shortly after eight o'clock and after breakfasting conducts family prayers as has been his custom for many years. He spends the day and evening in reading and writing and receiving callers and retires at about ten. He receives many letters and replies personally to the more important ones. He also writes a great deal for papers and writes other articles which may find their way into print later as the impressions and opinions of the World's oldest living legislator.

The Senator maintains a lively interest in the world's doings and happenings and is a constant reader of the newspapers. He follows with unabated interest the proceedings of the Canadian Parliament, but has not yet determined whether or not he will go to Ottawa this season.

He converses in a particularly animated manner about the Russian-Japanese war, and said that he had for many years watched events in the Far East, and had felt for a score or more years that it would be necessary for England to fight Russia in order to preserve her possessions. The intelligence, advancement and military prowess of the Japanese had surprised him, and he now felt that any attack by Russia upon England was an eventuality of the dim future because of Japan's virtual victory over the white bear.

The reporter was shown some letters and books indited by Senator there quarters of a century ago and when he was teaching school in Westmorland and Kent counties. The writing resembles engraving in its regularity and fineness and one book on geometry and mathematics prepared at that time would well do for a text book in the public schools to-day.

From all appearance the aged Senator is enjoying health and strength equal to that when he celebrated his one hundredth anniversary a year ago and seems likely to see more than one anniversary. He spent his anniversary on Sunday quietly with his family.

COUNTERFEIT BILLS

Description of a Bogus Five That Has Been in Circulation

The circulation of a counterfeit Five dollar Bank of Montreal bill, which sometime ago were issued quite extensively throughout Cape Breton and the eastern part of Nova Scotia, has naturally caused a general interest, owing to the fact that one of the counterfeiters has been detected by Teller Bancroft, the Bank of Montreal here.

Should any such bill be presented the following description will no doubt prove valuable to business men generally.

"This new counterfeit appeared in Toronto, Ont., and is of the issue dated Montreal, Jan 2 1895, bearing the portrait of Rt. Hon Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, right side of note; E. S. Clouston, General Manager, left end of note. This counterfeit will pass the careless handler of money, as the specimen before us has worn appearance. However the engraving of the portraits is poor, but the lettering on note in good. The figures in the number of the note are heavier and a lighter blue than those on the genuine. On the genuine the V. in centre of note, also panel lower face of note containing signatures, is pale green; on counterfeit it is a light brown, with slight green tint. The engraving of the portraits, also the lathe-work upon the right and left corners and centre of note, is very poor. Back of note is poorly executed and off color. Paper is of fair quality. We are indebted to Mr. A. W. Larmour, Savings Teller Canadian Bank of Commerce, Toronto, Ont., for information concerning this counterfeit."—Ex

ABOUT ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

Old Lamps Consume More
Current Than New Ones

Montreal, Feb. 15.—Users of the electric light frequently complain that their lighting bills are continually on the increase; and naturally enough when their accounts one-half year show a consumption of electricity almost double what it was in the corresponding half of the previous year they entertain a suspicion that meters are not to be trusted. An electrical engineer has made a statement to a "Witness" reporter which seems to afford a partial, if not a complete explanation of the variation of electric light accounts from year to year.

"This explanation," he said is to be sought for in the lamps, not in the meter nor in any inaccuracy in the reading of the meter. The current required to render the filament of a new 16-candle power electric lamp incandescent is three-quarters of an ampere per hour. A lamp maintaining its efficiency for about 1,000 hours, that is to say, there is no appreciable deterioration of the light and no considerable increase in the amount of current used until it has burned for a thousand hours. After burning for that length of time the lamps grow dim, as everybody can perceive, but also, what is not generally known, a much more powerful current is required to produce even that dim light. I have known a case of a lamp very badly burned consuming one and a quarter ampere per hour as against three quarters of an ampere. Thus you pay double for an inferior light, through the mistaken economy of using old lamps.

"Quite recently I was called on by a gentleman whose electric light bills had greatly increased, to have the readings of his meter checked. His fittings were tested in the first place and found to be sound. Then a light was casually turned on, and the explanation of the high bills was apparent. The lamp was almost burned out, and the waste on all his lamps which were more or less in the same condition, quite accounted for the increase in the company's bills.

I should never allow the electric company to supply lamps if I were paying by meter. It is not in the interest of a company to have the lamps in first-class order, because there is more current consumed with old lamps than with new. A company may not deliberately keep old lamps in use, but it is plain that it is not to their interest to renew them. It is however, the consumer's interest, and therefore he should keep the supply of lamps in his own hands.

ASSASSINATED

Grand Duke Sergius Murdered at Moscow

BOMB THROWN

Under Carriage. Sergius Was Chief of the Refractory Element

London, Feb. 17.—A despatch to Reuters from St Petersburg says a telephone message has been received there from Moscow announcing that an explosion has occurred at the Kremlin, where Grand Duke Sergius has been residing, and that it is rumored that the Grand Duke was killed. The despatch adds that no confirmation of the report has been obtained, and that the population of Moscow is greatly excited. According to another report a bomb was thrown beneath Grand Duke Sergius's carriage, and the latter with the Grand Duke was blown to pieces.

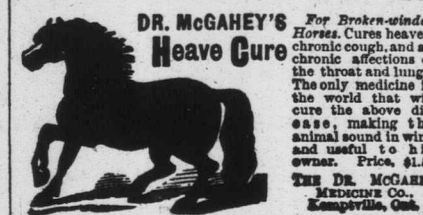

London, Feb. 17.—Another despatch to the Reuters' Telegram from St Petersburg says that a later telephone message from Moscow states that the Grand Duke Sergius was assassinated when driving towards the Kremlin and near the Court of Justice. His carriage was followed by another vehicle containing two men. A bomb was thrown beneath the Grand Duke's carriage. There was a violent explosion; the carriage was shattered, and the Grand Duke was killed. The assassins were arrested. One of them was wounded dangerously. Several students have been taken into custody.

St Petersburg, Feb. 17.—The Associated Press has received a despatch from Moscow stating that the Grand Duke Sergius, while driving in a carriage to the Kremlin at Moscow to-day, was assassinated by a bomb which was thrown beneath his carriage. The carriage was blown to pieces. The assassins were arrested. One of them was dangerously wounded. Several students who were in the vicinity were taken into custody.

The Grand Duke Sergius, uncle of the Russian Emperor and formerly Governor General of Moscow, is understood to have been condemned to death by the revolutionary party in December last. The Governor-Generalship of Moscow was abolished early in the year, and the Grand Duke according to despatches from Moscow Jan 4, kept closely to the well-guarded Nickolski Palace, on the outskirts of Moscow, retaining his position of commander-in-chief of the military district. Later in January, however, it was announced that the Grand Duke had sought refuge in one of the palaces of the Kremlin. He has been classed as the most reactionary member of the Imperial family as the head of what is referred to as the war party, and has been stigmatized by the liberals as Russia's evil genius. The Grand Duke was born in 1857, and was married in 1884 to Princess Elizabeth of Hesse-Darmstadt. They have no children.

GERMAN NAVY

The Building of New Battleships Discussed

BERLIN, Feb. 18.—At a meeting of the Reichstag budget commission Wednesday, Herr von Tirpitz, secretary of the imperial admiralty, made a speech which foreshadowed a bill to provide new battleships instead of cruisers which the Reichstag refused in 1900, seven new torpedo divisions, and possibly seven small cruisers. Herr von Tirpitz said that experience in the Far East confirmed the fundamental principle of the German programme that the navy's strength lay in battleships. The Radicals, Centrists and Socialists severely criticised naval expansion, declaring they saw no need for it. They denounced the government for not checking the agitation of the navy League. Herr von Tirpitz admitted that the league's programme was too far-reaching and said he would try to influence it to moderate its demands, but he maintained that a strong navy especially in battleships, is necessary to the maintenance of peace.
