PICTURES OF MEMORY.

By Alice Carey.

Among the beautiful pictures That hang on Memory's wall, Is one of a dim old forest, That seems the best of all;

I once had a little brother, With eyes that were dark and deep— In the lap of that old dim forest He felt in peace asleep;

PITCHERS.

Of all the beautiful pitchers That hang on our cupboard wall, Is one of dim old China, That seems the best of all;

I once had a little lover, With eyes that were dark and deep— How glad that that old pitcher Together we used to peep;

Recently his pale arm folded My neck in a meek embrace, As a glow like the hue of a peony Shone from his smiling face;

Varieties.

A GENTLE BOY.

"Be very gentle with her, my son," said Mrs. B., as she tied on her little girl's bonnet, and sent her out to play with her elder brother.

CHARACTER.—There is a glare about worldly success which is very apt to dazzle men's eyes. When we see a man rising in the world, thriving in business, successful in speculations—

Some modern authors say of gambling, that it is a "magical stream, into which, if a man once steps, and sets the sole of his foot, he will not keep until he is overwhelmed."
