and estates of not more then 1500 acres, being exempt from its operation. Objectionable, however, as we think them to be, they will not place the tenants who come under them in a worse position than they are at present. We admit that they may have their former heavy rents to pay, while others around them posses free hands; but the tenants on the estates of those proprietors who have not assented to the Commision will be in a similar position, unless some legislative action be tolerated of a kind which, when hitherto taken in this Colony, has never been sanctioned by the Crown. Bad as the case of the tenants who will not be allowed the possession of the award may turn out to be, they will not have so much reason to complain as tenants of proprietors at present have, considering that their neighbors on the Worrell and Selkink estates have been so favored by Government, as to be conferred the privilege of purchasing their farms on very reasonable terms, while they have not only been denied the boon, but have had so far to bear a part of the burden of the favor, by assisting to pay the interest of the money appropriated to the purchase of these estates. Even though the Loan clause of the award were to be affect upon, and £150,000 could be obtained through the guarantee of the British Government at a uncerty mount of the control of the server of the Loan scheme being adopted. Since this is the case, some proprietors would be induced to sail, and character would not; and thus the tenants of the latter might with as much justice complain that they had been unfairly treated, as those can, if the award go into operation, whose farms are not mall estates. Seeing, then, that there is no method which would prove astisfactory to all parties, we ought to decide in favor of the scheme which will confer the greatest good on the greatest number. ers gave in their award, owing to the provision which they have made in the arbitration clause. But heretofore some proprietors would scarcely dispose of their land at all, except in large blocks. Here the award will prove a decided advantage to the tenantry, particularly as by the operation of the arbitration clause it will in most cases doubtless be obtained at a considerably lower figure than 20 years' purchase.

The most objectionable clauses in the award, we consider, are those in reference to leases under 40 years, and estates of not more then 1500 acres, being exempt from its operation.
