FISH STORY .- This comes from Chatham and the World is responsible for it : There was a hailstorm in Wellfield some days ago, with thunder and lightning and when it had ceased several small fishes, some of them three inches long, were picked up on the ground, and several were found in springs. A spring by the roadside, at John Dignam's, in which there were no fish before, is alive with them now. They are growing in size, and are evidently quite at home in the spring. Mr. Dignam says they resemble mackerel in shape and color.

The Spring Hill Road.

A correspondent complains that the Spring Hill road is in a very unsatisfactory condition, and says that so important a highway as this ought to be kept in better repairs There is something in the complaint; but it may be added that we will never have as good roads as we ought to have, until a rule is adopted requiring repairs to be made earlier in the season. Good highways are of the first importance. Poor roads mean loss of time in travelling and much discomfort. People do not appreciate this as much as they ought to. It ruined him financially.
