Source of Parnell's Strength.

THE MYSTERY AND RESERVE HE HAS STUDIOUSLY MAINTAINED. (From the Pall Mall Gazette.)

Mr Parnell is the mystery-man of modern politics. He is the one man in that windy palace-house at Westminster who has risen to the front rank by holding his tongue.

He speaks but seldom, but when he does not exactly know what to say, he remains silent. Hence a reputation gained largely by the same simple method which led the ancients to select the owl as the bird of goddess of wisdom.

To him almost alone among parliament men silence has been golden. Nor is that by any means his only peculiarity. He has dwelt, and dwells apart. For many years it was said that he was the only member of the House of Commons who had no postal address.

In former years he used to disappear mysteriously from the haunts of men, and for days no one knew where to find him. Then he would reappear; and so great is the awe that he inspires among his associates that no one ventured to ask him where he had been.

This mystery and reserve, maintained studiously for eleven years on the part of a young man in the heart of the great gossiping-shop in all England, is a phenomenon almost without precedent. It has added greatly to his power, and it has enormously increased his influence among the impressionable superstitious people who have placed their destinies in his hands.

Whether he has adopted this attitude from calculation, or as a whim, it is difficult to say. The impetuous mystery of the man who has placed the destinies of the great Mokanna, who occupied that throne which the blind millions revere in him.

But in his case the veil is not so much of silver of impermeable brass. This apartness has often been referred to, but seldom has it been more graphically described than by Dr. Schreuder, one of the few and noblest of the press whom German journalism maintains in England. Describing "this engine in the shape of a human being," he writes:

"Parnell watches his mind as if it were a fortress, and no one is allowed to look through the windows of his eyes. His companions are as strange to him to-day as they were when he first met them. He knows where to make use of them in his parliamentary attacks, and beyond that all relations are broken off. In loneliness and solitude he goes his way, creating around him a desert, at the edge of which his followers are patiently awaiting his behests."

The are in which he is held by his followers, even by his very intimates, is in his own words, very noticeable. He is the head of the Irish sept—he must not be spoken of with irreverence, as if he were but a mortal. His is a sacred name, which it is better not to use for behind the veil of mystery there is a jealousy even as that of the sacred Juno, and even to the man who gives the Irish chiefdom cause to suspect of rivalry or lack of supreme devotion to the supreme chief.

Catholic Statistics.

From "The Catholic Directory for 1887" some interesting facts are gathered. The Catholic population of the Catholic body in England consisted of the families of a few peers and barons, a few county families, chiefly in the north and west, and a few scattered in the south and west of Ireland. Since the date of Catholic emancipation there has been a steady increase in numbers, and since 1850 there has been no longer any digression as to the prospects of the Catholic Church.

In that year England and Wales were mapped out into arch-dioceses and dioceses. In 1878 there were 109 dioceses in England and Wales, and there are fifteen such dioceses, in Scotland. Half a century ago in England and Wales there were more than 300 parishes, with about sixty in Scotland. Now there are over 2,500. The laity, of course, have greatly increased, but not in the same proportion. There are forty Roman Catholic members in the House of Commons, and some sixteen members of the Queen's Privy Council in England and Ireland profess the same belief. Five Roman Catholic members sit for English constituencies. In regard to foreign parts, it is stated that the archbishop of Rome sees "of the Latin and the Oriental Rites" amount to 172, and the bishop sees, including those of suffragans, to 729 more, including retired bishops and those who hold titular sees in paribus their total number is 1,187. The members of the Sacred College at Rome, when filled up, are seventy, but the number is seldom complete. At present there are six cardinal-bishops, forty-five cardinal-priests and thirteen cardinal-deacons. Among the latter the figures of the name of John Henry Newman, while the name of Manning stands sixth among the priests. The directory, which has reached its fifty-third annual issue, is published under the auspices of Cardinal Manning.

A cable despatch has been published representing that the London Standard has been commenting adversely on the condition of the finances of Canada. When it is stated that the Canadian correspondent of the Standard is one of the most rapid critics in the country and the correspondent of several American newspapers interested in crying down the credit of the Dominion, the false position of the Standard is can be easily understood.

Conversion of Paul Bert.

The Paris correspondent of the Liverpool "Catholic Times" thus describes this wonderful miracle of grace:

In closing an estimate of the career of the late Paul Bert, a few weeks ago, I ventured to use these words: "On the eve of his departure from Tonkin, Paul Bert stated that he had resolved to leave his worldly goods, and to devote himself to the study of the Gospel. He had since said, is not an article of exhortation. Let us hope that he spoke truly, that even at the last hour he realized how close he was advancing to the portals of eternity. A Merciful Creator vouchsafed to the unfortunate man the grace of sincere repentance." That hope has happily found its fruition. The gratifying intelligence has been received here, from an absolutely authoritative source, that the bitter-hater of the church, this malignant heresiarch, died a true and noble Catholic, fortified by the last sacrament. Mgr. Pinard, the new bishop of Kosa, has, in a letter to his Eminence Cardinal Simoni, prefect of the Propaganda, and to the members attending the miracle of grace of which he himself was a witness, "M. Paul Bert," writes his lordship, "was present at my consecration and he appeared to be under the influence of some deep emotion. When the ceremony was over he came into the sacristy and spoke to me these words, which I faithfully reproduce. 'Allow me to offer you my felicitations, in the name of France, and on my personal behalf. At this solemn moment I can not refrain from expressing my admiration for the devotion of those noble souls, for whom faith and patriotism are identical terms. Like St. Paul, I too, may find my road to Damascus.' 'Bereft of his bishopric, the conversion of the President general did not end there. Paul Bert received the last sacraments from the hands of the Abbe Devos, a Belgian priest.

A Baby Seized for Rent.

A baby and a little figure among the goods and chattels recently seized for non-payment of rent in Portree, Scotland. The thing seems incredible, but it is a cold fact. Here is the official list of articles seized by Alexander Macdonald, high sheriff of Inverness, on account of non-payment of rent by William McLean, a tenant of Lord Macdonald. It appears in the Glasgow Mail of Dec. 24—

- Dresser and crockery.....$0 16
  - Wooden seats.....0 0
  - Cradle and chair.....0 0
  - Spinning wheel.....0 10
  - 7wo beds and blankets.....0 10
  - Dog (puppy).....0 10
  - Chair and top.....0 10
  - Crab.....0 0
  - In part quantity of wood.....15 00
  - In stable, and other effects.....15 00
- All these articles were to be sold at auction after forty-eight hours. When this famous seizure was made the man McLean was the point of death. His wife and seven children were living on potatoes alone. They were clad in rags, and there was not a penny in the house. Babies and cradles are evident in the list. In Scotland, "Saxpence" is the official figure, while the puppy dog brings a shilling. Of course, the dog was a Skye. Probably that accounts for it.
